

[RESEARCHERS]

Do you want a polished academic resume that lasts?

With a single click, the HAL resume automatically aggregates and organises your publications deposited on the archive, highlighting your background and areas of expertise. Discover all its advantages!

For you

[First name] [Last name] 87% 69
 [Status] in [research field] Open Access Documents

Current affiliations
 [Establishment] [Lab, unit...]

Researcher identifiers
 Arxiv : name.p1
 Researcherid : E-1234-4567
 idRef : 12345678
 ORCID : 0000-0001-1234-4567
 VIAF : 12345678

Contact
 name.surname@univ-XXX.fr

Website
 http://labo.univ-XXX.fr/nom

Your activity showcase

Provides free access to all your publications and communications deposited on HAL

Evolves with you and your academic career

Is efficiently referenced by search engines

A time-saver

Quick and easy to build, all you need is an IdHAL

Automatically updated by each new HAL submission

Simplifies the application process, grant applications, funding...

- Make your HAL CV your personal archive, to quickly find and share your publications with your peers
- Choose to highlight the most significant document types by selecting of their display order
- Customise it with ready-to-use templates

For your peers

- An academic resume rooted in Open science standards of excellence, operated by a national infrastructure
- Multilingual for greater international reach

An efficient resume

Transparent one-page presentation of your publications, career path, responsibilities, projects, teaching, activities and grants.

Centralises all your identifiers, social networks and websites: the gateway to your network

Unique, intuitive navigation: integrated search engine, filters, export of publications list in various formats...

Features a short URL for easy sharing

Find out more

- Access the feature : <https://hal.science/user/cv/>
- HAL documentation (French only) : How to create and modify your resume

Resources