CALL NUMBER: YCAL MSS 703

CREATOR: Percival, James Gates, 1795-1856

TITLE: James Gates Percival collection

DATES: 1800-1944

BULK DATES: 1820-1850

PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION: 5.34 linear feet (16 boxes) + 1 broadside folder, 1 art

LANGUAGE: Most materials are in English.

SUMMARY: The James Gates Percival Collection consist of writings, notebooks, personal papers, correspondence, maps, and other papers that document Percival's life and work. Writings are autograph manuscripts of poetry and prose compositions on linguistics, geology, and geography, including several drafts of his Report on the Geology of Connecticut, as well as chemistry notes by West Point professor James Cutbush. Percival's notebooks contain writings and notes on a broad range of topics in addition to his classroom notes from school, college, and medical school days. Personal papers include contracts, agreements, and subscriber lists related to his publications; inventories and invoices documenting his large library collection; and other financial papers, primarily bills for personal expenses including room, board, and clothing. Correspondence files hold letters to and from many prominent colleagues and scholars such as Benjamin Silliman and Edward C. Herrick in New Haven, friends including George Hayward in Boston, his publishers Sidney Babcock, Samuel G. Goodrich, and Samuel Walker, and editors such as Eliza Leslie and Louisa C. Tuthill. Percival was a member of the New Haven Sing-Song Club and the collection documents his contributions to that organization. Also present is a portrait painting of Percival by his brother Edwin Percival, and a group of papers regarding Percival's life and work compiled by J. H. Ward, Herbert E. Gregory, and others, including a memoir of him by Caroline Howard Gilman.

James Gates Percival (1795-1856)

James Gates Percival, an American poet, physician, linguist, geologist, bibliophile, and autodidact, was born in Kensington, Connecticut, on September 15, 1795. After attending boarding school he entered Yale College in 1810 and graduated in 1815. Percival began medical school at the University of Pennsylvania in 1818 but returned to Yale to complete his degree in 1820. He practiced medicine in Connecticut and Charleston, South Carolina, and briefly taught chemistry at West Point in 1824. Returning to Connecticut, he studied linguistics and European languages (particularly German), assisted Noah Webster with his American Dictionary of the English Language (1828), and prepared new editions of Vicesimus Knox's Elegant Extracts (1826) and Conrad Malte-Brun's A System of Universal Geography (1834). His former Yale professor and mentor Benjamin Silliman encouraged Percival's appointment as Connecticut state geologist in 1835, which led to his amassing great quantities of geological data that were eventually published in his volume Report on the Geology of the State of Connecticut (1842). Hired to survey lead mines in Illinois and Wisconsin in 1853, Percival spent his last years in the Midwest, becoming the state geologist of Wisconsin in 1854; he died in Hazel Green, Wisconsin, on May 2, 1856.

Percival began writing poetry while in boarding school, his most notable work being the epic-length poem "The Commerciad"; later verses were published in the early 1820s in the New Haven Microscope, the United States Literary Gazette, and other newspapers. His collected Poems (1821) included his well-regarded "Prometheus" and inspired the publication of Prometheus Part II with Other Poems (1822). His series Clio I, Clio II (both 1822), and Clio III (1827) were followed fifteen years later by his final volume of poetry, The Dream of a Day (1843).

Series VI: Maps and Art, 1830-1840*4 Folders*

Includes 1 art storage item

Series VI primarily contains twenty-two hand-drawn maps in ink, graphite, and crayon on paper; several of the maps were annotated on their versos by Percival's biographer J. H. Ward. The nineteen maps of Connecticut record in minute detail data on the geology of the state, and may have been created for Percival's work Report on the Geology of the State of Connecticut (1842) or his Geological Reports on the Middletown Silver-lead mines, Middletown, Connecticut (1853). Another map is labeled on its verso "Trap and Sandstone of New Jersey" and is likely related to material in Box 3, folder 94 (Report on the Trap and sandstone of New Jersey).

The remaining two maps are of foreign lands: Scotland and northern Europe. The former was previously misidentified by the library as a map of Pennsylvania, probably due to the initials "Pa" (meaning parish) after each place name inscribed on it. The latter portrays parts of countries in northern Europe including Holland, France, Denmark, Germany, Prussia, and Austria. It may have been prepared for Percival's 1834 edition of Malte-Brun's System of Universal Geography; it was inscribed on the verso by Ward: Documents showing Percival's studies, but of no quotable or practical value J. H. W.

Also here is a portrait painting of Percival by his brother Edwin Percival. He was born in Kensington, Connecticut, in 1793, studied art in Hartford, Connecticut, and died in greatly reduced circumstances in Troy, New York, about 1847.

b. 16 (Broadside), f. 433	Geology maps of Connecticut (3 maps) and New Jersey Gift of Chester R. Longwell (Yale PhD 1920), 1939.	circa 1840
b. 16 (Broadside), f. 433	Scotland and Europe	circa 1830
b. 17 (Art), f. 434	James Gates Percival, by Edwin Percival; oil on panel Gift of the Misses Brandegee, 1927.	circa 1830

Series VII: Other Papers Related to Percival and his Work, 1859-1944

0.21 linear feet (1 box)

The series holds small groups of material that document Percival's life. It includes some of J. H. Ward's correspondence and research notes, a folder of material regarding Percival collected by Herbert E. Gregory, and other manuscript and printed material written about Percival, including a memoir by Caroline Howard Gilman.

Series VII is organized by the consecutive numbers assigned by library staff.

550. J. H. Ward papers
