THE ROOKIE JAIME BARRIA

BY PETE DONOVAN

Jaime Barria sailed through the minor leagues in 2017, posting solid earned run averages in each of his three stops — Inland Empire (A Ball, 2.48), Mobile (AA, 3.21) and Salt Lake (AAA, 2.45).

So it came as no surprise early in the 2018 season when Angel starters Matt Shoemaker and Andrew Heaney were forced to the disabled list with injuries that Barria got the call to the majors. No surprise to anyone — except Jamie Barria.

“I’m only 21 years old,” Barria said at the time (he turned 22 on July 18). “I thought this moment would come, just not so soon.”

But the rookie from Panama pitched well beyond his age, becoming a consistent winner and solid starter for an Angel rotation that had been hit hard by injuries all season and, in reality, previous seasons as well.

How hard hit? In early July, eight of the nine potential starting pitchers for the Angels this season had been on the disabled list. Barria was the only one not injured.

Barria had carved out quite a nice resume in the minors including making the California League Mid-Season All-Star team in 2017, being selected to the Futures Game (where he pitched one scoreless inning and struck out two batters) and twice being named the Angels Pitcher of the Month. He had risen to the No. 6 prospect in the organization — this after signing as an international free agent back in 2013 when he was just 17 years old.

On June 1, Barria threw six shutout innings against Texas and 45-year-old Bartolo Colon in a 6-0 Angel win. It was the largest age gap in Angel history (21 years, 318 days). “When he debuted, I was barely one year old,” Barria said of Colon. “It’s really impressive. It was a great moment to share with him and watch him pitch.”

The club’s gifted defender at shortstop, Andrelton Simmons, has had high praise for the rookie.

“He’s been amazing the whole year. He’s not fazed at all. It doesn’t matter who he’s pitching against, he’s always composed. They might get a couple hits here and there but he comes back at hitters and that’s all you can ask of a pitcher, especially a young guy.”

Angels skipper Mike Scioscia agreed.

“His poise is well beyond what you would expect a young 21-year-old coming up to the Major Leagues,” Scioscia said. “Anytime you have outings like he’s had, it can’t help but make your footprints a little bit deeper.

“He’s shown us a lot. He’s shown us a lot coming through our Minor League system, and he’s shown us a lot in the looks he’s had so far in the major leagues.”

From May 3 to June 1, Barria won four straight decisions, the longest win streak for any Angel pitcher this season.

“He has a tremendous future in front of him. He can be an anchor in our rotation for years to come if he continues to grow and learn,” said pitching coach Charles Nagy.

Barria is also not the first player from Panama to grace the Angel roster — Hall of Famer Rod Carew is a Panamanian (as is Yankee legend Mariano Rivera).

“Mariano was a legend because I pitched,” said Barria. “I loved how he attacked hitters. The hitters knew the cutter was coming, but it didn’t matter.”

And now it is Barria who is carving out his own legacy in the game.

THE ROOKIE JUSTIN ANDERSON

BY PETE DONOVAN

The minor leagues of baseball are embedded with thousands of prospects. They're young, green, new to the game, full of wide-eyed optimism. The dream of "The Show" drives them as they tumble along back roads in busses and vans from one small town to the next.

For a 14th round draft selection like Justin Anderson, the road seems longer, harder. Uphill.

Hope is the constant companion. Reality a far distant, rarely discussed, relative. The towns and the years whiz by: Orem in 2014, Burlington in '15, Inland Empire in '16, Mobile in 2017.

But here it is in 2018 and there he is in the middle of the Angel locker room and Angel bullpen. None other than Justin Anderson.

THE ROOKIE

JUSTIN ANDERSON

A Major Leaguer playing a prominent role.

"They called me when I was in [triple A] Salt Lake. The next thing I knew I was in Houston with the Angels and warming up in the bullpen. I had called my family and my girlfriend Briana because I'm from that part of Texas. They were all in Houston when I got on the mound for the first time.

"I lost it," said the right-hander, who learned that the Angels were playing the Astros in a text from his girlfriend. "I was like, 'You gotta be kidding me,'" he told the Los Angeles Times.

"I did not see this coming at all. I kinda was feeling like I could make a push this year, definitely. For it to come as fast as it did was totally unexpected.

"I guess there was a big crowd but I could only hear my family. I was so focused."

It was April 23 and Anderson pitched one scoreless inning. In his first seven games, he didn't allow a run while striking out 15 batters in 10.2 innings.

A month later, May 23, he got his first Major League win in Toronto.

"It was all a blur, those first two or three days," Anderson recalled.

Those folks in the stands in Houston might well have been the only ones who believed Justin Anderson would make it to the big leagues. After all, he was a 25-year-old who began the season in AA Mobile and with a career minor league record of 21-27.

But he made some adjustments this past off-season. Enough adjustments it turns out that changed his game from suspect to prospect.

"I worked out at the Texas Sports Center back home, made adjustments and continued to make changes when I got to spring training. It was a combination of things I was working on: velocity, spin and location were all together."

"This guy's stuff is really good, but he gets hit," his agent Jay Franklin said. "The stuff is really good, but there was no angle. The fastball would be flat. The breaking ball would be flat. You have to have tilt and deception to keep those guys at the Major League level off it."

Anderson's role with the Angels has been flexible in the first two months. He's been a middle-inning reliever and a closer.

"I am just here to do whatever the team needs me to do," says Anderson.

"He's prepared long and hard for this opportunity," Manager Mike Scioscia said. "Through trial and error, he's figured out some things that will make him a more dynamic pitcher."

With a fastball that sits just under 100 miles an hour and a wicked slider, Anderson's stay in an Angels uniform could be quite long.

MIKE TROUT AT THE 2018 MLB ALL-STAR GAME

On behalf of the Angels Organization and baseball fans everywhere, congratulations to Mike Trout on another outstanding All-Star Game performance.

Mike Trout is an exceptional ambassador for the game. Combined with his talent, his solid character creates a perfect role model for young people everywhere. Each year, Mike devotes a tremendous amount of his time and effort contributing to our Organization, and marketing Major League Baseball. He continually chooses to participate in the community, visiting hospitals, schools, and countless other charities.

One of Mike's traits that people admire most is his humility. His brand is built upon generously spending his time engaging with fans, both at home and on the road, while remaining a remarkable baseball player and teammate.

In addition, Mike spends quality time as a husband, son, brother, uncle, and friend. We applaud him for prioritizing his personal values over commercial self-promotion. That is rare in today's society and stands out as much as his extraordinary talent.

THE BIG

The 2018 season marks the Halos' 53rd season at Angel Stadium, their home for 53 of their 58 seasons. After spending their first five years of existence playing at Wrigley Field and Chavez Ravine, the Angels landed in their new home in Orange County. Since opening the doors for its first exhibition game April 9, 1966, Angel Stadium has played host to some of the Club's memorable events including seven Western Division clinching games (1979, 1982, 1986, 2007, 2008, 2009 and 2014), three All-Star Games (1967, 1989 and 2010) and the 2002 World Series, including the Angels Game 7 victory over the San Francisco Giants to clinch the franchise's first championship. Angel Stadium has also seen several individual Halos leave their indelible marks on the game of baseball. Whether it be the four Angels no-hitters, Rod Carew's 3,000th hit, Reggie Jackson's 500th home run, Don Sutton's 300th win or Albert Pujols' 600th home run, Angel Stadium has housed some of Major League Baseball's most prestigious accomplishments.

Presently, Angel Stadium sits as baseball's fourth-oldest ballpark, trailing only Boston's Fenway Park, Chicago's Wrigley Field and Los Angeles' Dodger Stadium. Affectionately known as "The Big A", Angel Stadium has seen over 116 million fans pass through its gates since 1966, including a current stretch of 15 consecutive seasons of three million fans, a streak only the Angels and Yankees have achieved since 2003.

After an Aug. 31, 1964 groundbreaking ceremony, Anaheim Stadium, as it was originally known, was completed in 1966 at a cost of $24 million.

The facility's centerpiece was a giant A-frame scoreboard standing 230 feet high and was the source of the stadium's nickname.

With a seating capacity of 43,250, Anaheim Stadium was built with "Convenience, Comfort and Courtesy" in mind. Narrow foul territory areas and quickly rising decks gave fans an up-close view of the action. Gradually inclined ramps, escalators, wide aisles and helpful ushers as well as three surrounding free ways, 26 entrance lanes and 28 exit lanes added to the Big A's accessibility.

Anaheim Stadium underwent construction to enclose the stadium in 1979 for additional seating to accommodate the football Rams. Seating capacity was increased to 64,593 for baseball and more than 70,000 for football. A total of 108 executive style boxes were added to surround the rear of the Club Level. In addition to the Stadium Club, there were two other private dining areas designed for groups — the Stadium Pavilion and the Football Press Box.

At that time, the Big A board was preserved and moved to the edge of the parking lot adjacent to the Orange Freeway behind the right field area.

When the Rams left for St. Louis, Anaheim Stadium's primary tenant remained the Angels, who originally signed a 35-year contract (through 2001). Renovations began Oct. 1, 1996, to revert the 30-year old structure back to a baseball only facility and the ballpark was renamed Edison International Field. The total cost for the stadium renovation was estimated at $100 million and the project was completed in time for the

THE BIG

Angels Opening Day, April 1, 1998. New enhancements were added all around the ballpark but perhaps the most noticeable is the center field waterfalls and rock formation that come together to form an “A”. Settled inside the waterfall’s rapids are water geysers that originally shot water into the air whenever an Angels player hit a home run.

Other unique features of Angel Stadium include terraced bullpens in the outfield, widened concourses, new restroom and concession areas, family-oriented seating sections, state-of-the-art club-level and dugout-level suites, a youth-oriented interactive game area and landscaped courtyards (with statues in remembrance of Gene Autry and Michelle Carew).

In addition, Angel Stadium includes two full-service restaurants: The Knot Hole Club (a sports bar located at the club level down the right field line) and The Diamond Club (an upscale restaurant with outdoor seating on the field level behind home plate). In 2014, the newest luxury seating area was added to the ballpark with the opening of HALO, now known as the Don Julio Club.

During the 2016 and 2017 offseasons, Angel Stadium underwent several major upgrades. The first round of improvements began immediately following the 2016 season when a new state of the art LED stadium light system were installed. This past offseason, Angel Stadium received one of it’s largest technological enhancements to date. The new right field display is currently the third largest in Major League Baseball at 9,500 square feet and features 7.7 million LEDs. Eight ribbon displays totaling 1,168 feet in length were installed along the seating fascia to provide additional statistics and graphics. The largest of these included the entire fascia length along the first and third baselines. Finally, a new out of town scoreboard replaced the existing board on the right field wall. All total, the Club added more than 23,000 square feet of new LED displays to their home venue.

Also installed prior to the 2018 season was a new state-of-the art sound system. The main seating bowl now has 300 speakers plus more than 50 subwoofers and is powered by 200,000 watts.

With the enhancements made throughout the course of the last several years, Angel Stadium proudly maintains the title of the fourth-oldest ballpark in the Majors while offering its guests access to some of the latest technological amenities. As a result, Angel Stadium continues to be one of Southern California’s most unique sports venues.

Nestled in the corner of the Angel Stadium parking lot is one of the ballpark’s most recognizable features, “The Big A” message board. With the completion of Anaheim Stadium in 1966, the facility’s centerpiece was a giant A-frame scoreboard standing 230 feet high. At the time, it was the largest scoreboard ever constructed and became the source of the stadium’s nickname. The Big A’s original home was just beyond the left field wall where it served as the facility’s main scoreboard for over a decade. When the stadium underwent construction to accommodate the Los Angeles Rams in 1979, The Big A was preserved and moved to its current location in the southeastern corner of the parking lot, adjacent to the 57 freeway. Contractors used a 125-ton crane and two large dollies to move the structure over 1,200 feet across the stadium lots.

The Angels have long utilized The Big A to celebrate each of the clubs victories. After every Angel win, both home and road, the 70-foot wide halo atop the Big A is illuminated for fans both inside the ballpark and out to see. It is customary for the halo to remain lit until dawn the day following a victory. The Angels are one of the few sports franchises whose post-victory tradition signals a win to all within sight of their facility.

Since its construction in 1966, The Big A has undergone several modifications and facelifts. The scoreboard’s original color palette was all white with a gold halo before becoming green, gold and beige when the stadium was renamed Edison Field. In February, 2002, with the club switching their uniform scheme back to red as the primary color, the Big A was painted red and beige. The landmark then underwent additional changes after the 2009 season when the structure was painted all red. A new full-color display was added to the front facade replacing the former dot-matrix board and a new halo was placed at the top. A third extensive renovation took place prior to the 2018 season as part of Angel Stadium’s overall enhancements. The Big A received a new LED marquee, illuminated Angel Stadium sign, fresh coats of paint with a new modernized LED Halo adorning the top of the famed structure.

As it currently sits, the Club has the ability to display full pictures, texts and graphics as well as turn the halo nearly any color it desires. The most commonly displayed colors on the structure’s crown are red, white, blue, green and orange.

OWNERSHIP

ARTE AND CAROLE MORENO

In May of 2003, Carole and Arte Moreno were introduced as the third owners in Angels franchise history and their impact was immediate. The Moreno's have guided the franchise to six A.L. West Division titles and 15 consecutive seasons drawing over three million fans, resulting in a total home attendance over 46 million in their tenure.

The Morenos' focus is balanced between baseball, business operations and fan experience. In 2009, the Halos were voted the top franchise in professional sports in "Fan Value and Experience" by voters in a fan poll by ESPN the Magazine. In the poll, the Angels ranked in the top three among Major League teams for 10 consecutive seasons (2003-2012).

Carole and Arte's support of the baseball operations department has culminated in key free agent signings of players such as three time N.L. MVP Albert Pujols, nine-time Gold Glove outfielder Torii Hunter, 2009 World Series MVP Hideki Matsui, 2005 A.L. Cy Young Award winner Bartolo Colon, 2004 A.L. MVP Vladimir Guerrero, and several others. In 2014, the Moreno's signed two time A.L. MVP Mike Trout to a six-year contract extension and recently committed to a five-year deal with Justin Upton.

Since purchasing the Club on May 22, 2003, the Angels have sported a 1292-1094 record (.541 winning pct.). During the family's tenure, the organization has continued to cultivate players from its farm system. Their dedication has paid dividends in the development of significant players such as Trout, Gold Glove outfielder Kole Calhoun, Garrett Richards, C.J. Cron, Matt Shoemaker and Cam Bedrosian among several others.

Over the past 15 years, Carole and Arte have strengthened the Club's commitment to local communities and beyond. In January of 2004, the Moreno's established the Angels Baseball Foundation concentrating on investments in education, health care, arts & sciences and community-related youth programs to experience the positive attributes of baseball. The Angels Foundation distributes annual grants to various programs within Southern California. In 2010, the Angels were privileged to host their third All-Star Game (also 1967 & 1989). In conjunction with MLB's All-Star Legacy Fund, the foundation funded renovation of softball fields at Anaheim's Pioneer Park (into the MLB Angels All-Star Complex) as well as the special-surfaced field for the Miracle League of Orange County for disabled youth. The foundation regularly donates tickets, memorabilia and ballpark experiences to the various groups and fundraisers.

In addition to their responsibilities with the Angels and various committees within MLB, the Moreno's were part of ownership of the former Single-A Salt Lake Trappers of the Pioneer League. Under their leadership, the Trappers won three championships. Carole and Arte were also original investors in the Arizona Diamondbacks (including their 2001 World Series championship) and in a partnered ownership of the NBA's Phoenix Suns.

The Moreno family is also active in their own philanthropic efforts. In 1997, Carole and Arte established the Moreno Family Foundation to support nonprofit organizations focusing on youth and education as well as investing in educational scholarships in K-8, high school and college. Their favorite charities include St. Vincent de Paul, St. Mary's Food, Bank the Barrow Neurological Institute, Boys & Girls Clubs, United Methodist Outreach Ministries (UMOM) family homeless shelters, American Heart Association and Fresh Start Women's Foundation. The Moreno's were previously members of the Little League Foundation's Board of Trustees, which assists Little Leagues in every state and more than 70 other countries.

Carole was born in Reno, NV, and moved often as the daughter of a career Air Force man. She spent much of her youth in Fredonia, KS, and went on to earn a degree in journalism from the University of Kansas. Arte is native of Tucson, AZ, and served his country in Vietnam as a member of the U.S. Army. After his tour of duty, he attended the University of Arizona, graduating with a degree in marketing. In 2005, Time Magazine selected Moreno as one of the 25 Most Influential Hispanics in America. Carole and Arte Moreno are parents of three children.

THE MANAGER MIKE SCIOSCIA

- > Mike Scioscia entered the 2018 campaign as the longest tenured manager in the Majors (19th season).
- > His .538 winning pct. is tops in franchise history (1,570-1,346).
- > He is one of only three managers all-time to reach 1,500 wins with one team (Walter Alston and Tommy Lasorda).
- > Scioscia entered 2018 ranked 22nd on all-time wins list (Dick Williams is 21st with 1,571).

MOST GAMES MANAGED FOR ONE FRANCHISE

Connie Mack, Athletics - 7,466	Walter Alston, Dodgers - 3,658
John McGraw, Giants - 4,424	Tommy Lasorda, Dodgers - 3,040
Bobby Cox, Braves - 3,860	Mike Scioscia, Angels - 2,916

TEACHER AND THE STUDENT

The Angels victory on May 29 in Detroit was by the final score of 9-2.

It was also Mike Scioscia's 1600th career win as a big league manager — all with the Angels — but in addition to reaching a nice, round number the win meant so much more — it surpassed Tommy Lasorda for 20th all-time.

Scioscia of course played his entire 13-year big league playing career under Lasorda with the Dodgers. It was indeed a special moment in baseball history but for the ever-loyal Scioscia — currently the longest-tenured manager in all of baseball— he took the accomplishment in stride. Like usual.

He also, as usual, politely deflected the attention away from himself.

"It reflects on our organization that we have been going in the right direction and it has given me the chance to be here long enough to be part of our fair share of wins. I don't look at it as a personal accomplishment," Scioscia told FOX Sports West.

Scioscia is, however, quick to praise Lasorda, the Hall of Famer and winner of two World Series championships as a skipper...and a man who truly bleeds Dodger Blue.

"He supported me incredibly as a player," Scioscia told the Orange County Register. "I know he wants us to do well, but he's very quick to point out, not as well as the Dodgers. He's made that very clear."

The teacher is proud of the student.

"It took a better man than me," Lasorda told the Orange County Register. "He is great. I am happy for him. He is one of the greatest managers and one of the greatest players that God ever put on this earth. I am so proud of him."

Scioscia now ranks second all-time among manager wins with only one franchise. Walter Alston — the Dodger manager before Lasorda — won 2,040 contests over his 23 campaigns in the dugout.

YES, HE PLAYED FOR THE ANGELS

TONY CONIGLIARO

A native of Swampscott, Massachusetts, Tony Conigliaro played the bulk of his career with the Boston Red Sox and hit a home run in his first at-bat at Fenway Park in 1964 at only 19 years old. A year later, he became the youngest player to lead his league in home runs when he hit 32 in 1965, his second full season in the big leagues. He also became the youngest American League player to reach 100 home runs when he hit No. 100 at 22 years and 197 days old, just 65 days older than the major league record holder at the time (Mel Ott — 22 years, 132 days).

Conigliaro's early promise of on-the-field greatness went unfulfilled however after he was struck in the face by a pitch on August 18, 1967 in a game against the Angels. The pitch fractured his left cheekbone, dislocated his jaw and severely damaged the retina in his left eye.

He missed all of the 1968 season but returned to play two more years in Boston, hitting a career-high 36 home runs for the Sox in 1970, when he also drove in 116 runs. He was traded after the season to the Angels, but declining vision led him to announce his retirement in 1971. He attempted another comeback for the Red Sox in 1975, but ended his career after batting just .123 in 69 plate appearances. That year, after an excellent spring training, he made

Boston's regular-season roster and got the team's first hit of that season and later the club's first home run. He was outrighted to Triple-A Pawtucket in mid-June and he retired shortly after.

Conigliaro originally signed with the Red Sox in 1963 after graduation from St. Mary's High School in nearby Lynn. In his only minor league season he hit .363 with 24 homers and 74 RBI in 83 games for Wellsville (earning New York-Penn League MVP Rookie of the Year honors). He broke in with the Red Sox in 1964, and after hitting that homer in his first at-bat at Fenway Park he finished the '64 campaign with a .290 batting average and 24 home runs to earn an All-Rookie selection.

Conigliaro passed away in 1990 after an eight-year struggle to return from a massive heart attack that left him severely handicapped. He was 45 years old.

YES, I PLAYED WITH TONY CONIGLIARO

TONY CONIGLIARO PLAYED IN 74 GAMES WITH THE ANGELS IN 1971; HE BATTED .222 WITH FOUR HOME RUNS AND 15 RUNS BATTED IN.

BY CLYDE WRIGHT

Tony Conigliaro had a heckuva career while it lasted. Unfortunately, it was cut short due to injury, an injury I was there to witness before briefly playing with Tony Conig or Tony C — that is what I called him — as an Angel.

When I think of Tony as a young player, I think back to the very nice swing he had. It wasn't necessarily a hard swing or a violent swing. He would closely follow every pitch and he didn't get fooled during an at-bat. I will never forget his swing.

He was an All-Star player at a young age but I was on the Angels team bench when the injury occurred. Jack Hamilton — who actually passed away a few months ago — was on the mound for us in Boston. The ball got away from him and it is just that simple. It was up and in and it just got away from him.

As I best recall it, Tony C did not move. He got hit straight on. It was, at least from where I was sitting, like he froze. It is embedded in my brain that he didn't try and move away from it. He just got nailed.

At the time it happened, I would not have thought it would have the lingering effects that it did. You don't think there and then that someone's career might be over. I have actually seen some other guys get hit which initially seemed to be worse than when Tony got hit. Don Mincher got hit by Sam McDowell, and that was a bloody mess, and I think of when Paul Schall — who also just passed away — was hit by Jose Santiago of Boston and that seemed worse. But what happened to Tony cost him his career.

Part of that career included time with the Angels. I remember his last game with us well. He had struck out a few times in that game — we were playing in Oakland I believe — and on his way back to the dugout he pitched his helmet in the air and swung and hit it with his bat. He hit the helmet as square as you could hit in and someone yelled he should hit the ball that hard. I think that is the night he decided to give it up and retire.

And that is unfortunate because you never want to see a serious injury and you never want to see where an injury changes someone's entire career. I feel the way he started out, if he had played 15 years in the big leagues, he would have been in the Hall of Fame.

Clyde Wright won 100 games in the big leagues over a career which spanned 10 seasons, including eight with the Angels from 1966-73. The 1970 season was his best as he won 22 games, was named to the All-Star team and tossed a no-hitter, the first in Angel Stadium.

FISH ON FISH SPEED

MIKE TROUT IS THE GAME'S TOP FIVE-TOOL PLAYER. ANGELS HALL OF FAMER TIM SALMON THIS SEASON BREAKS DOWN EACH OF TROUT'S "TOOLS" IN ANGEL MAGAZINE.

Mike is blessed with great speed but one of the things that really separates him from other guys in baseball who run well is how he is built overall.

When you look at the way he is built, it does make you scratch your head a little to think he is fast as he is. The best comparison to me is Bo Jackson, who I got to play with. The combination of size and strength and speed is very unique. Another guy who sort of fits that bill was Rickey Henderson though he didn't have the same size as Mike or Bo. Most of the speedy guys are half Mike's size.

Speed plays well for all parts of Mike's game. He can get to those balls in the field more than most guys can get to. At the plate he can beat out a hit that most guys can't beat out. It is also one of the aspects of his game that helped get him on the radar of so many people when he was breaking in with the Angels organization, along with the stolen bases early on.

The stolen bases have come down in recent years, however. When you are 240 pounds and you are consistently diving into the ground, the body is not meant to take that sort of beating. It can also lead to injury like we saw last year in Miami. At the same time, he is smart enough to make those adjustments and to learn from it. Still it is a big part of his game overall.

I think last year he made an effort to steal more bags and stealing bags is more than just speed. It takes a lot of work. You work on your lead, how you scout the pitchers, how you take that first step. Maybe that came easy to him early on. Other teams make adjustments to your game and, again, he is smart enough to use the speed, which has always been there, and go beyond the cat-and-mouse antics that take place within the game itself. You try and stay ahead of everything in this game as best you can.

GENE AUTRY'S COWBOY CODE

The movies, radio dramas, television episodes and comic books of Gene Autry — Gene Autry the founder and original owner of the Angels — always had storylines with Gene Autry doing the right thing or helping folks make the right choices in tough situations. In the late 1940s a formal code of ethics emerged and was known by his fans as “Gene Autry’s Cowboy Code” or the “Cowboy Commandments.”

Author Holly George-Warren researched the origins of “Gene Autry’s Cowboy Code” and wrote about it in her award-winning book Public Cowboy No. 1: The Life and Times of Gene Autry. Here’s an excerpt:

Gene’s Ten Cowboy Commandments began to evolve from such Autry-related publicity as the item “Nine Cardinal Rules Govern Production of All Autry Films,” which ran in the 1949 press book for the film “Riders in the Sky.” As early as August 1947, Gene had pronounced cowboy code mandates during his Melody Ranch radio show dramas. Gene’s PR team promoted his Cowboy Code, which was referred to in the 1948 Life magazine feature, and fan magazines began to publicize the rules as they evolved. Tenets promoting an ethical, moral and patriotic lifestyle had an affinity to those of such youth organizations as the Boy Scouts, which developed similar doctrines. The rules were a natural progression of Gene’s philosophies going back to his first Melody Ranch programs — and early pictures.

GENE AUTRY'S COWBOY CODE

1. The Cowboy must never shoot first, hit a smaller man, or take unfair advantage.
2. He must never go back on his word, or a trust confided in him.
3. He must always tell the truth.
4. He must be gentle with children, the elderly, and animals.
5. He must not advocate or possess racially or religiously intolerant ideas.
6. He must help people in distress.
7. He must be a good worker.
8. He must keep himself clean in thought, speech, action, and personal habits.
9. He must respect women, parents, and his nation’s laws.
10. The Cowboy is a patriot.

LEFTY GETS IT RIGHT

Angels left-handed reliever Jose Alvarez has not turned 30 yet but he already ranks amongst Halo hurlers in games pitched all-time.

In his fifth season with the club, Alvarez is 16th in games pitched for the franchise and ranks sixth when it comes to southpaws. This season he has surpassed several Angels on that list including fellow lefties Rudy May, Frank Tanana and Mark Langston.

In each of the past three seasons, Alvarez has appeared in exactly 64 games. Last year he earned his first save with the team and he has compiled nine wins as an Angel since he was acquired from Detroit in exchange for infielder Andrew Romine prior to the start of the 2014 campaign.

Alvarez has never started a game for the Angels but did start six games in his lone season with the Tigers (2013). Among Angels pitchers all-time, Alvarez ranks seventh in games pitched while working exclusively out of the bullpen, behind Troy Percival, Francisco Rodriguez, Kevin Jepsen, Mike Holtz (also a lefty), Brendan Donnelly and Bryan Harvey.

Alvarez has covered 212 innings in the 240 games he has seen action in with the Angels.

OHTANI

Angels outfielder Michael Hermosillo recorded his first career hit this season. It will be a moment he always remembers...and a moment the rookie can look back upon and enjoy via photos and video as time goes by.

When he watches the video, or glances at the photo, it probably looks different than it would have had the personal milestone happened a year or so earlier.

For Mike Trout, he too sports a bit of a different look this season. Sure, he is putting up his typical MVP-like statistics but he is also doing something this season he has never done up until this 2018 campaign.

Both Trout, Hermosillo and several of their Angels teammates are putting, well, safety first.

Hermosillo sports a face-guard as part of his batting helmet. It is a bit of a new trend in the big leagues which most recently become en vogue by the likes of Jason Heyward in 2013 and Giancarlo Stanton in 2015 after his 2014 season came to an abrupt end when he was hit in the face with a pitch. Hermosillo didn't even wear one in spring training.

Trout meanwhile wears the similar face-guard — a plastic extension that helps cover his face — on offense and when he is on base he adds a big red mitten that covers his entire left hand. While it sure isn't going to win any fashion awards it helps protect his fingers when he runs the bases (Trout, of course, last season went on the disabled list for the first time after suffering a torn ligament in his left thumb while sliding headfirst into second base).

In March, Trout made the decision to add to his head-wear after getting hit by a pitch in spring training. "I was thinking about it before," Trout told reporters then. "That sealed the deal."

Shohei Ohtani does not (yet) wear the face-guard but when the pitcher/designated hitter has a bat in his hands he sports protective padding on his right hand (his throwing hand), elbow (his throwing elbow) and ankle at the dish.

Catchers Martin Maldonado and Rene Rivera (both used to masks) have also decided to add a face-guard to their batting helmet as has teammate Jefry Marte.

Angels reliever Noé Ramirez was born in Los Angeles and pitched at Alhambra High School.

Upon graduation he committed to Cal State Fullerton, where he would pitch for three years. Ultimately he was drafted by the Red Sox in 2011 and joined the Angels in 2017.

With the Titans from 2009-2011, Ramirez won 29 games. Working primarily as a starting pitcher Ramirez won 12 games as a sophomore and he posted a 1.74 ERA as a junior.

He also was honored with the following awards: 2010 3rd Team College All-American; 2010 Big West Conference All-Conference Team; and 2011 Big West Conference All-Conference Team.

STONY BROOK HALL OF FAME NICK TROPEANO

Angels pitcher Nick Tropeano is a Hall of Famer.

The Stony Brook (NY) Department of Athletics this summer announced the Stony Brook Athletics Hall of Fame Class of 2018, which includes the Angels right-hander.

Tropeano is another in a long line of Stony Brook baseball standouts who have gone on to play at the professional level. Following his junior season in 2011, he was selected in the fifth round of the 2011 MLB Amateur Draft by the Houston Astros and three years later became the third former Seawolf to reach the major leagues when he made his debut with the big league club.

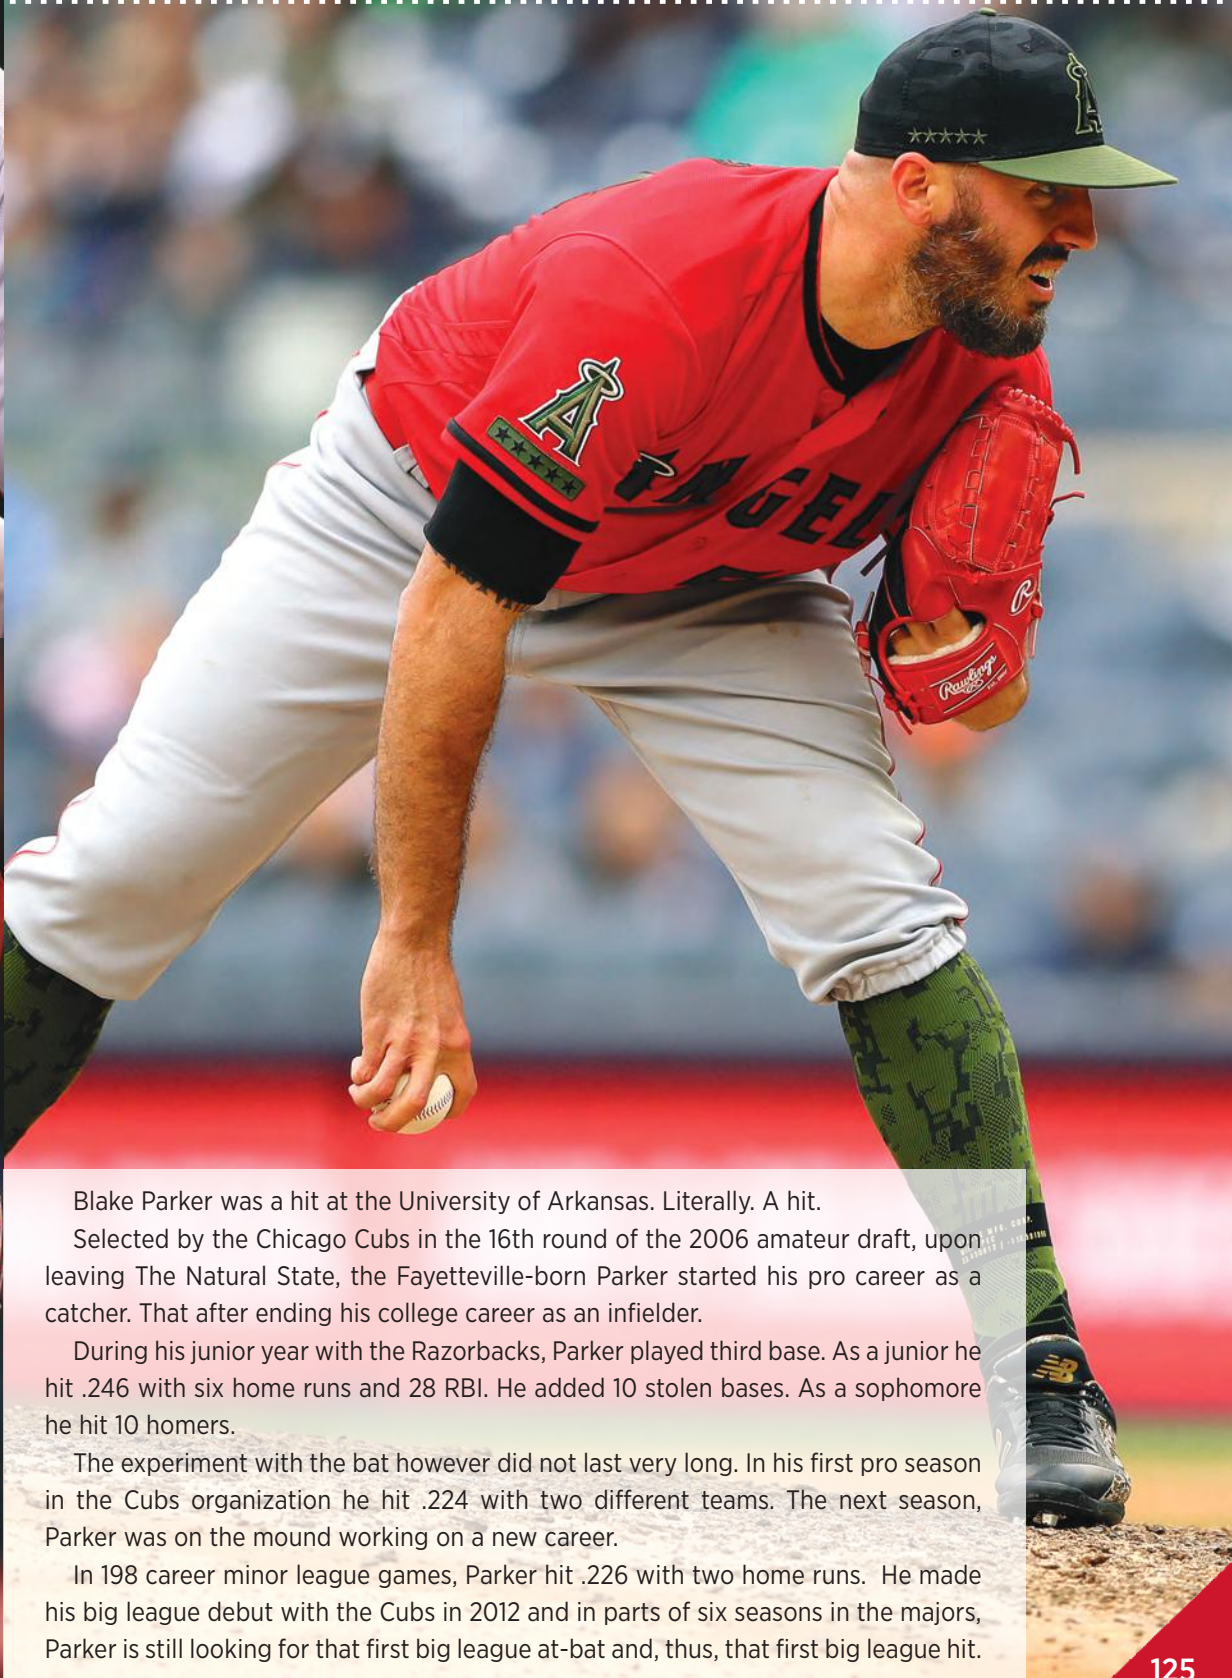

During his three-year career as a Seawolf, Tropeano earned 25 victories on the mound that was, at the time, tied for the school record, and posted a 2.85 career ERA, the program's All-time Division I record and fourth best overall. His 12 victories in 2011 topped the America East Conference and still stands as the single-season record along with fellow HOF inductee Tyler Johnson (12 in 2012). He struck out 275 batters, the fourth most in Stony Brook history.

The Class of '18 will be inducted on October 19 as part of the weekend's homecoming celebration. The Stony Brook Athletics Rita and Kurt Eppenstein Hall of Fame began in 1991.

COLLEGE BALL BLAKE PARKER

Blake Parker was a hit at the University of Arkansas. Literally. A hit.

Selected by the Chicago Cubs in the 16th round of the 2006 amateur draft, upon leaving The Natural State, the Fayetteville-born Parker started his pro career as a catcher. That after ending his college career as an infielder.

During his junior year with the Razorbacks, Parker played third base. As a junior he hit .246 with six home runs and 28 RBI. He added 10 stolen bases. As a sophomore he hit 10 homers.

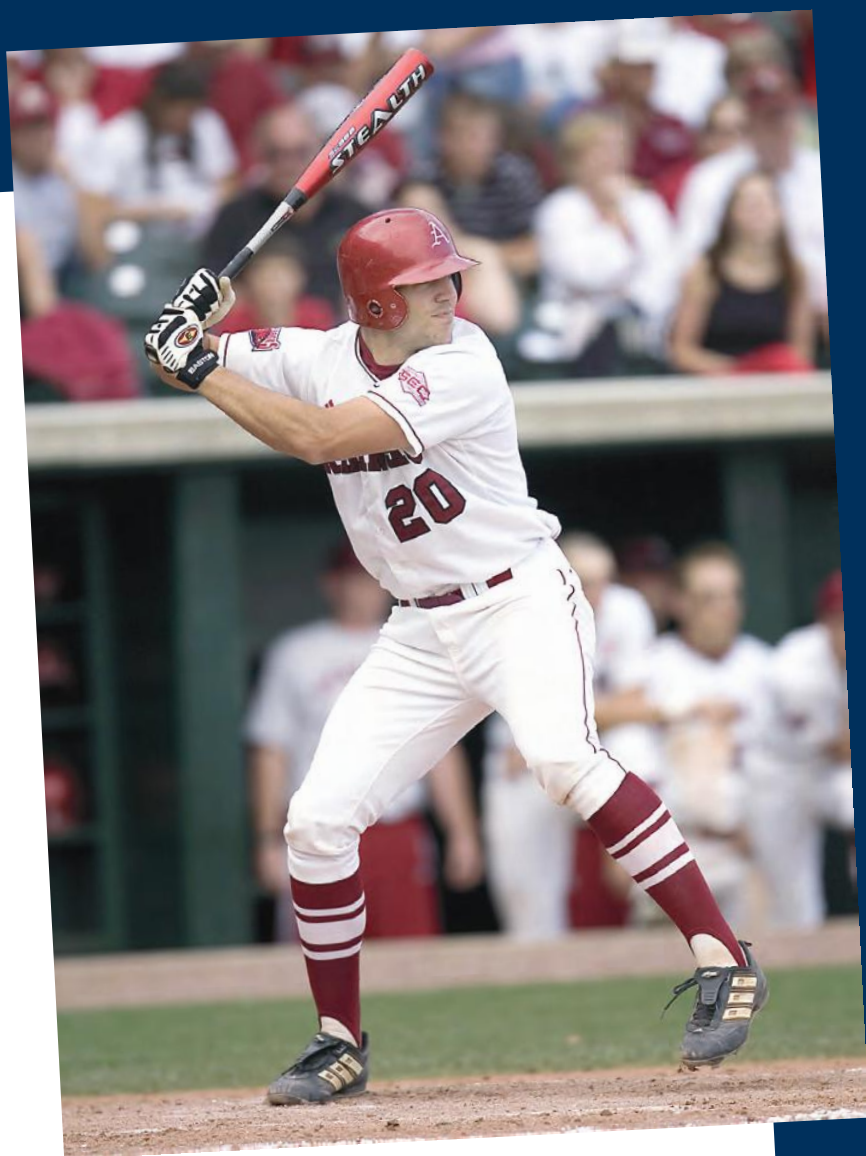

The experiment with the bat however did not last very long. In his first pro season in the Cubs organization he hit .224 with two different teams. The next season, Parker was on the mound working on a new career.

In 198 career minor league games, Parker hit .226 with two home runs. He made his big league debut with the Cubs in 2012 and in parts of six seasons in the majors, Parker is still looking for that first big league at-bat and, thus, that first big league hit.

FIRST-YEAR PLAYER DRAFT

THE ANGELS SELECTED 40 PLAYERS — 25 FROM COLLEGE AND 14 FROM HIGH SCHOOL — INCLUDING OUTFIELDER JORDYN ADAMS 17TH OVERALL

The Angels selected outfielder Jordyn Adams out of Green Hope High School (Cary, NC) as their first pick (1st round, 17th overall) in the 2018 First-Year Player Draft.

Adams, 18, hit .453 with five doubles, three triples, a home run and 15 RBI during his senior season at Green Hope. During his junior season at Blythewood High School in South Carolina, he batted .494 with 18 RBI and one home run. He also stole 26 bases, including five in one game for a school record. Also among his highlight was his participation in the 2017 Under Armour All-America Game at Wrigley Field where he hit a walk-off single in the 11th inning. The 6-2, 175-pound outfielder is committed to play both baseball and football at the University of North Carolina.

The North Carolina-born Adams is the second consecutive high school outfielder to be selected with the Angels' first overall pick. Last season, the Halos chose Jo Adell (Ballard High School in Louisville, KY) with the 10th overall pick. It also marked the Angels having selected a high school player with their first selection of the first round in consecutive seasons for the first time since Randal Grichuk was selected 24th overall in 2009, (followed by Mike Trout at 25th overall) and Kaleb Cowart was the 18th overall selection in 2010.

The Angels have held the 17th overall selection in the draft on three previous occasions, with all three players reaching the Major Leagues within three years of their selection: Dennis Rasmussen (1980 Draft), Eduardo Perez (1991 Draft) and C.J. Cron (2011 Draft).

JORDYN ADAMS

The Angels then selected infielder Jeremiah Jackson (2nd round, 57th overall) from St. Luke's Episcopal School (Mobile, AL) to complete their selections on the first day of the 2018 First-Year Player Draft.

Jackson, 18, completed his senior year with a .644 batting average with 54 runs scored, nine doubles, four triples, 15 home runs and 49 RBI. Jackson has started at shortstop for St. Luke's Episcopal since he was a seventh-grader, helping the Wildcats win a pair of state championships. Additionally, in 12 appearances as a pitcher this season, he went 3-1 with a 2.55 ERA in 24.2 innings pitched) and 42 strikeouts. Jackson is the first Alabama high school middle infielder to be selected within the first three rounds since Bo Jackson was picked by the Yankees in 1982. He has a college commitment to Mississippi State University.

The Angels in 2018 chose high school players with both of their first two picks in a draft for the first time since 2010 when Cowart and Cam Bedrosian (29th overall) were selected.

On Day 2 of the 2018 First-Year Player Draft, the Halos drafted eight players — each a right-handed pitcher and four with North Carolina ties during rounds 3-10.

With their third round pick (93rd overall), the Angels selected right-hander Aaron Hernandez from Texas A&M University, Corpus Christi. Standing at 6-foot-2 and weighing 170 pounds, he posted a 3-5 record with a 4.55 ERA, and struck out a career-high 102 batters in 83 innings this season to become the seventh hurler all-time in school history to reach the 100 strikeout mark.

The Halos' fourth round pick (121st overall) was right-hander Kyle Bradish, a junior from New Mexico State University. Bradish compiled a 25-8 record with 311 strikeouts while holding opponents to a .220 batting average over 272 innings during his three collegiate campaigns. He was named to the All-Western Athletic Conference First-Team as well as the All-WAC Tournament Team and NCAA Lubbock All-Regional Team.

With their fifth round pick, the Angels selected outfielder/right-hander William English from Western International High School. English committed to play with the Tennessee Volunteers. Right-hander Austin Warren, a senior from UNC Wilmington, was selected as the Angels' sixth round pick. He enjoyed an 8-0 record with two saves, a 1.75 ERA and 60 strikeouts in 46.1 innings in his last collegiate campaign.

The Angels also selected their fourth NC native, right-hander reliever Andrew Wantz, as their seventh pick. Wantz went 23-8 with a 3.80 ERA with 278 strikeouts in his four seasons at UNC Greensboro, and he was named the Southern Conference Co-Pitcher of the Year and Collegiate Baseball National Pitcher of the Week in his sophomore campaign.

The Halos' chose another pitcher with their eighth round selection, Tyler Smith, from Canisius College in Buffalo. Smith finished his junior season with a 3-0 mark and a 0.30 ERA.

To round out the club's top 10 selections he Halos' ninth round pick — and second selection from the state of Michigan — was Jake Lee, a senior at Oakland University. He finished his third campaign with the Golden Grizzlies tallying a 13.38 SO/9 and 112 strikeouts. Ben Morrison from Western Kentucky University with their 10th selection. Morrison led the team with 10.89 SO/9 and six saves and was named to the All-Academic Team during his sophomore campaign.

The Angels finished the three-day draft selecting 40 players, including 25 from college and 14 from high school. They drafted 29 pitchers, 10 position players and one two-way player. The Halos selected 22 players from the southern region of the nation, including six from the Carolinas. Four draftees have Southern California ties.

As of mid-June, 23 players had agreed to contract terms with the Angels.

Albert Pujols last season hit his 600th home run. This year he has continued his ascent up that famous list.

The most accomplished active home run hitter in baseball, Pujols started the 2018 campaign seventh all-time with 614 homers. Adrian Beltre and Miguel Cabrera, for the sake of comparison among today's sluggers, both had 462 home runs as of Opening Day.

In addition to No. 600 one season ago, Pujols passed Jim Thome and Sammy Sosa (the homer to surpass Sosa also saw Pujols become the most decorated home run hitter ever born outside the United States). With his first 16 home runs this season, Pujols tied Ken Griffey, Jr. (he officially tied Griffey on July 12 when he hit two homers at home against Seattle).

Willie Mays sits fifth all-time with 660 homers.

Pujols also this season moved into baseball's top-10 list in doubles. Pujols is the only hitter in baseball history to rank in the top-10 in home runs and doubles.

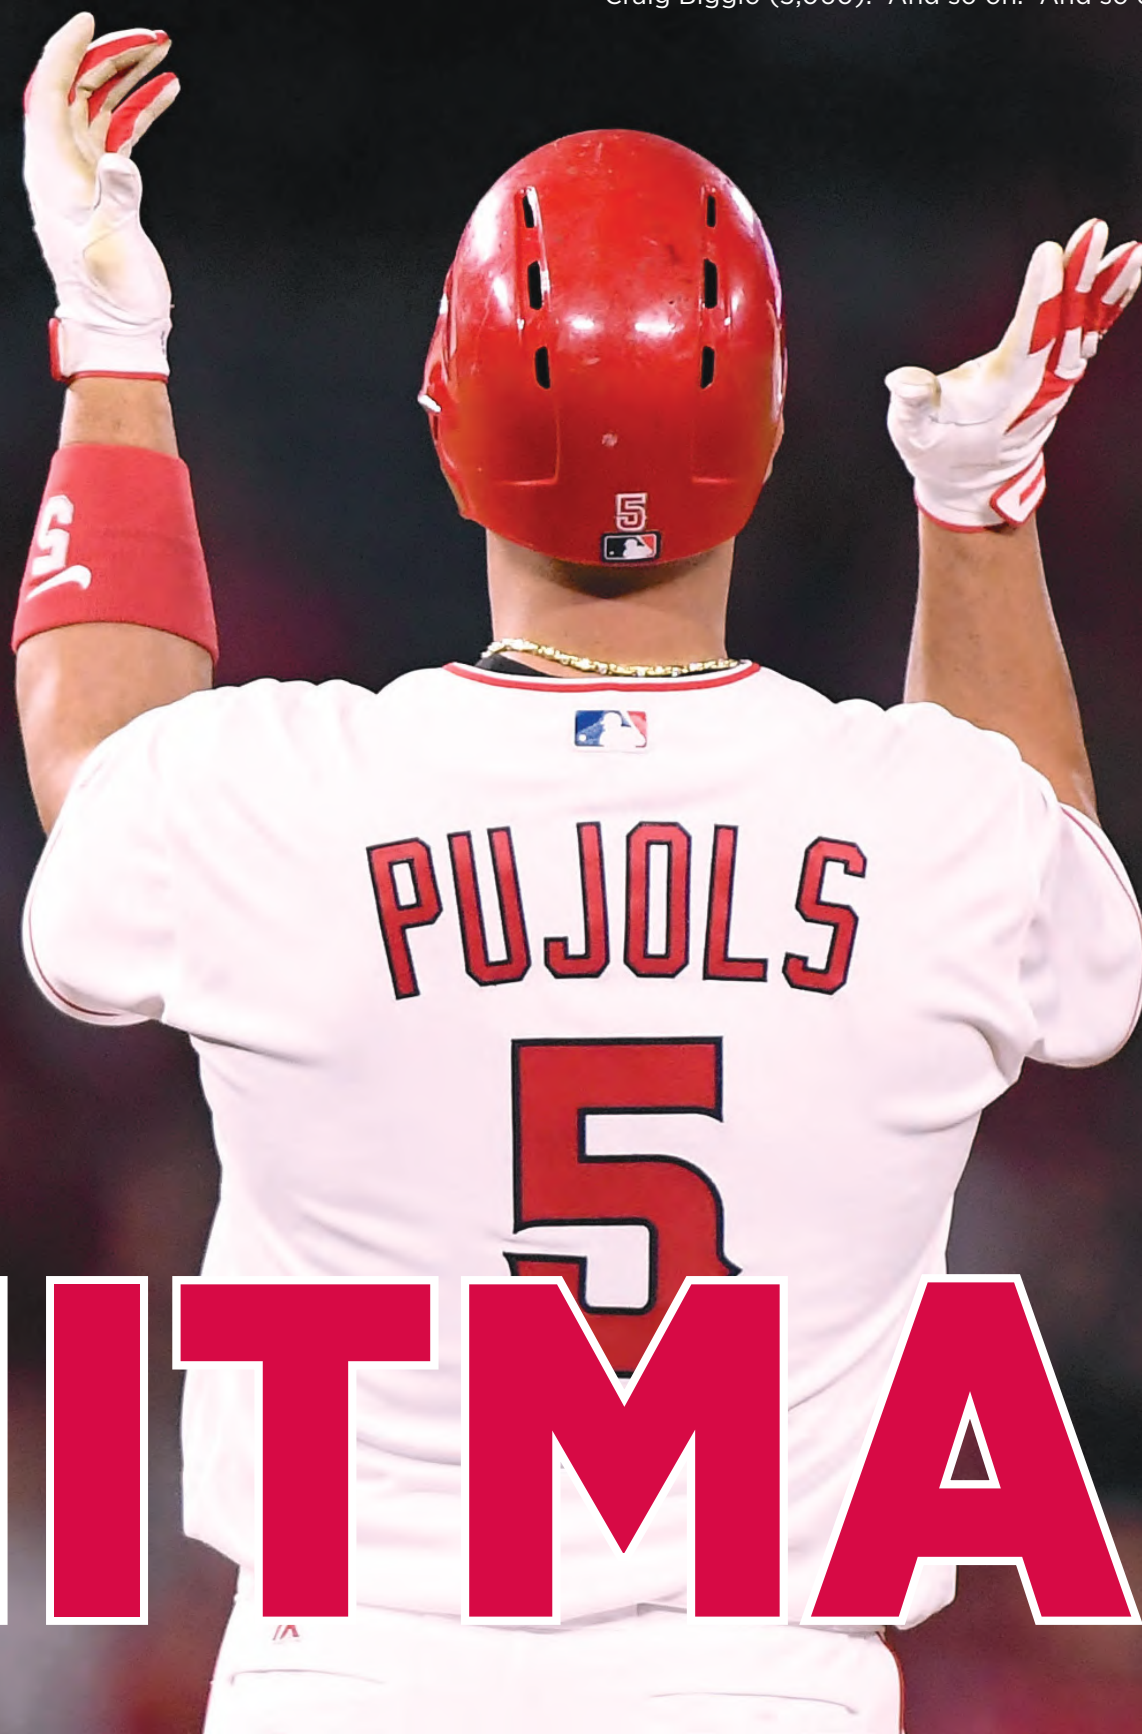

Albert Pujols entered the record books here in 2018. Sound familiar?

As the hits keep coming, Pujols continues to climb that all-time list of immortal hitters. His 3,000th career hit earlier this season did more than make the highlights and add to his Hall of Fame resume. It also tied him with Roberto Clemente....and the trend has continued during these warm summer months.

Al Kaline (3,007). Wade Boggs (3,010). Cap Anson (3,011). Rafael Palmeiro (3,020). Lou Brock (3,023). Interestingly enough the man who now holds the 26th spot is none other than Rod Carew, the only other player to record his 3,000th hit as an Angel.

Carew ended his brilliant career with 3,053 hits. Pujols' three hits on June 12 gave him 3,055 for his career, passing Carew and tying Rickey Henderson for 25th all-time. And the march continues: Craig Biggio (3,060). And so on. And so on.

HITMAN

STEAKS

There are a lot of monikers for the term RBI/runs batted in. Ribby or ribeye are among the most popular.

Albert Pujols is baseball's active leader in steaks. He began this season ninth all-time and he has surpassed Jimmie Foxx, Ty Cobb and Stan Musial to date. Next up? Lou Gehrig (1995 RBIs) and then Barry Bonds (1996 RBIs).

Pujols entered the 2018 campaign with 1918 runs batted in. When he drives in his 2000th career run, he will be fifth all-time. In his first 10 seasons he averaged 123 RBI. The last two seasons have seen Pujols average 110 steaks. Pujols with the Angels has eclipsed the 100-RBI plateau on four different occasions.

Hank Aaron is baseball all-time leader with 2297 RBI over his 23 seasons. This is Pujols' 18th season.

“You can’t say enough about what Andrew did. The quality of his pitches, maintaining his stuff, pitching with his back against the wall the whole game — it was a great job of finishing it off. His stuff in the ninth inning was as good as his stuff during the game and that is a great sign.”

TYLER SKAGGS:

“I was hoping he was going to make it through the ninth. It was fantastic especially past 100 pitches. He looked great and it could not happen to a better guy, especially on your birthday. It was the cherry on top for his birthday.”

JUSTIN UPTON:

“It was awesome. He looked locked in from pitch one. Even behind in the count he was making quality pitches and executing his plan.”

BLAKE PARKER:

“It was absolutely fun to watch. It was a great performance. I don’t feel like there was one hard hit ball against him the whole game.”

Andrew Heaney is going to remember turning 27 years old.

After all, the lefty threw one of the best games — if not the best game — of his career, tossing his first career complete game and shutout in a 1-0 win at home against the Royals.

“It is amazing,” Heaney told Fox Sports West’s Alex Curry right after the game before a bucket of Powerade was dumped on him by his teammates. “I was glad we got the win and it was a lot of fun. We had a good game plan going into this game.”

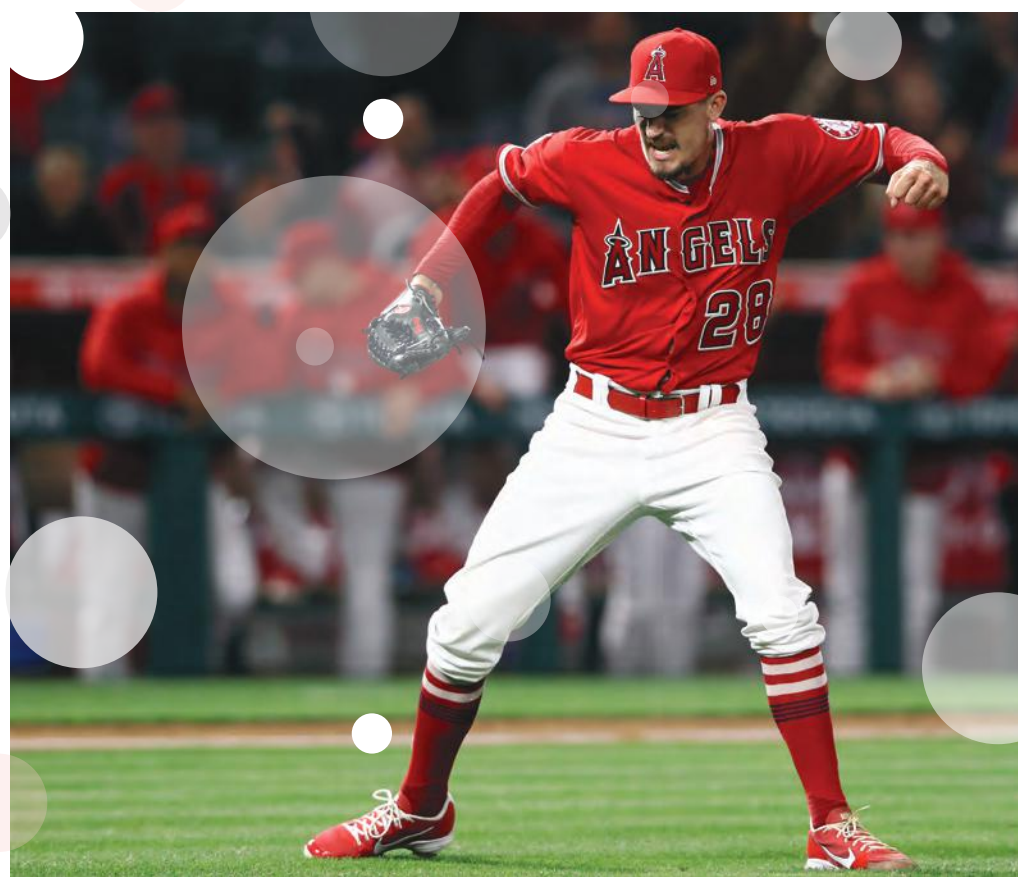

It marked the first shutout by an Angel since Ricky Nolasco (July 1, 2017 vs. Seattle) and first complete game one-hitter for the team since Ervin Santana (June 16, 2012 vs. Arizona).

The standout performance also marked the first one-hit shutout by an Angels southpaw since Chuck Finley in 1989 and Heaney became the first player in the big leagues to throw a one-hit shutout on his birthday since Vicente Palacios of the Cardinals in 1994.

The last Angels hurler to throw a shutout on his birthday? You would have to go all the way back to Andy Messersmith and August 6, 1971 vs. Minnesota.

Heaney recorded 13 groundouts, 10 flyouts and four strikeouts. He threw 116 pitches and teammates and coaches, needless to say, were impressed.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, HEANDOG!

THANK YOU FOR YOUR SUPPORT

The in-game experience at Angel Stadium is second to none. Year after year, the Angels faithful help give the club a true home field advantage.

Among all American League teams last year, the Angels ranked third in attendance. As of the start of this season, the Angels have drawn three million fans for 15 consecutive years, a franchise-best.

Once again, the Angels say “THANK YOU FANS.”
