Q-AND-A WITH MIKE TROUT

BY KURT LOE

Q. What's the best thing about having a 12-year deal?

A. The best thing about having a 12-year deal is knowing that you are going to be in this spot for a while. And I know what to expect. Each and every season I come in, I know where I'm going to be.

Q. What is it going to mean that for 12 years you don't have to worry about anything?

A. Yeah, that's another big thing is just being able to go out there and play. I don't have to worry about any other things. I don't have to worry about a contract and I can just do my thing and just go out and play baseball.

Q. Did that ever become a concern for you?

A. Ah, no. But, you know, it's definitely comforting.

Q. How much of an interest was it to look at the market?

A. There was. But, I'm obviously happy here. So, my wife and I made that decision that we wanted to stay.

Q. What do you like most about playing in Southern California?

A. You cannot beat the weather — every night 70 degrees. And obviously, living by the beach is awesome.

Q. What has this year, the last few years, taught you?

A. Offensively, I know my swing. And just with experience over the last few years — not just the last two, year by year, getting better in all aspects.

Q-AND-A WITH MIKE TROUT

Q. What about off the field? With your brother in law and now with Tyler?

A. Yeah, it's tough to get through. Life is short. We have to love our loved ones, hug our friends, family. You can't take this life for granted.

Q. How did all that put this game into perspective for you?

A. I mean, you don't know what you have until you lose it. Obviously, with my brother in law and now with Tyler to be able to come in here with the guys and just see how we came together and know what we have in here. It is a great team thing.

Q. Were you impressed to find out what you had in here?

A. Yeah, I was. I knew we had that. I think that really put us over the top just knowing that we knew we needed each other. And you saw that.

Q. Throughout all of this, you have pretty much become the spokesman. How do you like that role?

A. I think it has been eight years now. And, obviously, we got great guys in here. Good veteran guys speak up as well. But I think the guys needed it. They look up to me and Albert and I think Tyler would have wanted me to do that.

Q. How do you look at your role on the team now and how has it changed?

A. I think it has changed just by growing into a leadership role by speaking more and just being more vocal.

Q. Do you like the leadership role?

A. I do. I always like to do what I can to help the team win, to help the team improve. And obviously, if there are young guys who need advice, I'm here in any way from my swing to their swing, on the field off the field. If they have anything (questions). I think I learned that from a lot of guys like Albert and Torii. They did the same thing. And I think it's getting to that period in my career where it's starting to be my turn.

Q. Having played eight years of some of the best baseball, ever seen, what's that like for you? Did you ever think it would be like this?

A. I mean, obviously, you have to have trust in your ability and believe in yourself. I just try to get better every other day. And I think coming in here and learning things. I have just always been positive and had that confidence.

Q. What type of things have you learned?

A. I think just finding my swing. The biggest thing is, offensively, just knowing when my swing feels good and when it does not.

Q. So how hard is that?

A. It's tough. The game is crazy. Sometimes you feel good at the plate and you don't get any hits. And sometimes you go up there, not so hot, and you get a hit. So it's a crazy game and you have got to stay positive.

Q. What do you like most about playing this game?

A. I think playing with my teammates and winning. We have got a great group of guys now in this clubhouse and it's a joy coming to the field.

Q-AND-A WITH MIKE TROUT

Q. What is the least favorite thing about playing the game?

A. My least favorite is losing. I think everybody's least favorite thing is to lose.

Q. From day one, how do you handle losing?

A. It is a long season so you have to turn the page. Once it's over, it's over and the next day comes and you have to try and win the next one.

Q. How hard has it been for you to learn how to turn that page?

A. It is tough because obviously losing sucks. You want to win. I think over the years, you've learned how to turn the page quickly. I think if you carry it over to the next game, it hurts you.

Q. Is there a key for you to it?

A. I don't think it is a key. I think it is just going home and going to sleep and waking up to a new day.

Q. Are you starting to feel like there are more important things than this game or is the game still No. 1 for you?

A. Obviously family and my wife, they always come first before anything. But coming to the field, seeing my teammates and just seeing everybody and the friendships that I have developed over the years means a lot to me too.

Q. What do you like to do in your spare time during the season?

A. I like to golf. I like to hang out with friends, my wife and the dog.

Q. What about video games?

A. No, I will leave that to Fletch and the guys. I am not a big video game guy really.

Q. What about a TV or movie watcher?

A. I mean, every once in a while. I think Kole gives me a good TV show to watch. Like Homeland.

Q. How important is the equipment that you use to play this great game?

A. I think it is big. I think that I have a comfort zone with the stuff I like and stuff that I use with the Nike shoes and the Nike batting gloves and obviously Old Hickory bats. That is what I've been using my whole career.

Q. What do you look for in good equipment, bats in particular?

A. Just comfort and the look. You have to look good to play well. I have always swung Old Hickory because I like it.

Q. What is the offseason like for you?

A. I like to kind of keep it low key. I like deer hunting and fishing and playing golf.

Q. How do you cope with being a superstar? Do you feel any pressure to live up to your billing or responsibility to those who look up to you especially the kids? What do you tell them, or would you tell them, when you hear things like I want to be just like Mike Trout?

A. I try to be myself. I don't put pressure on myself. I don't try to do too much. If you try to do too much that is when you get into trouble. I have fun and that's the biggest thing — you always want to have fun. You want to put a smile on every kids face and give back all you can by giving them the opportunity to play baseball and meet me. I know as a kid I would have liked the opportunity to meet a guy who played professional baseball if that is one of the things in life that you want to become. It all starts in school you get good grades first and athletics come second.

Q. Do you like the idea of being a role model for the youngsters?

A. I enjoy it a lot. I try to lead people in the right way and put smiles on kids' faces and stay out of trouble.

Q. Where do you see yourself in another 10 years? Still on the diamond?

A. Hopefully, I'm still playing. I want to be in this game as long as I can as long as my body holds up and go from there.

Q. What do you think about when you hear your name mentioned with the all-time greats ever to play this game?

A. It means a lot. Obviously, a lot of guys pave the way for you. For me to go out and play my game and be compared to the way the all-time greats play the game means a lot to me.

LUIS RENGIFO

Venezuela

RENGIFO & SUAREZ

JOSE SUAREZ

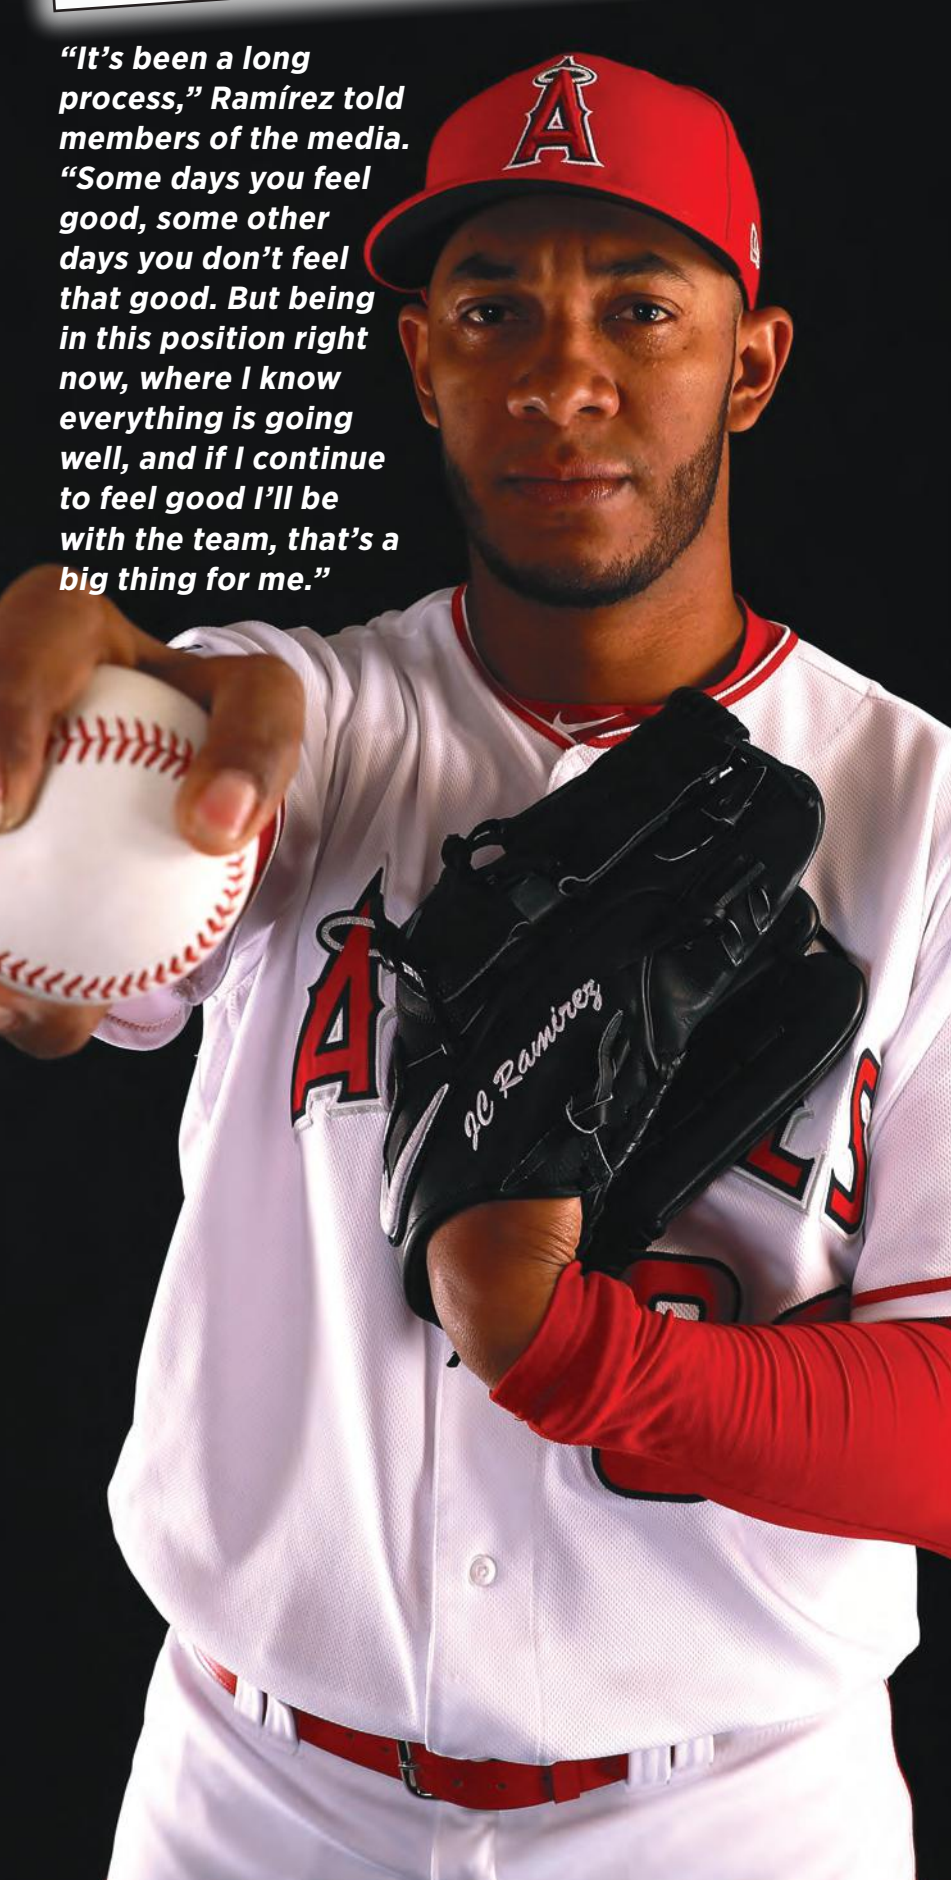

Luis Rengifo (2-26-97) and Jose Suarez (1-3-98) were born less than a year apart in the same town — Naguanagua — Venezuela.

THE RETURN

“It’s been a long process,” Ramirez told members of the media. “Some days you feel good, some other days you don’t feel that good. But being in this position right now, where I know everything is going well, and if I continue to feel good I’ll be with the team, that’s a big thing for me.”

When the 2017 Angels season ended, an unlikely candidate led the team in wins that season: JC Ramirez.

Fast forward to this past July and Ramirez was on the mound. He pitched a scoreless ninth inning in what was a lopsided home loss to the Tigers. He struck out one and did not allow a run. It was a rather unspectacular appearance except for what it meant to Ramirez.

Going back to 2017, Ramirez enjoyed a career year with a new organization. After bouncing around between the Phillies, Indians, Mariners, Diamondbacks and Reds organizations the previous three campaigns, the big right-hander finished the 2016 season in the Angels bullpen before shifting gears that next season.

Now serving as a starting pitcher, for the first time in his career, Ramirez surprisingly won those 11 games and his career was indeed on an upward swing.

Then came last season. Ramirez pitched in two games and was suddenly lost for the rest of the season after his pitching elbow was surgically reconstructed that April. It would take 15 months for Ramirez to get back onto a big league field.

That comeback is now complete.

TYLER'S LEGACY

Tyler never missed an opportunity to empower his community, especially its youngest members. You could find him at the children's hospital volunteering, at local elementary schools as a youth mentor, and even at the neighborhood park teaching young baseball fans how to throw a perfect curveball.

The Tyler Skaggs Baseball Foundation was established to honor and preserve Tyler's legacy. Just as he was always ready to step up to the plate and use his platform to help children and families, it is our commitment to do the same.

PUP CUP ORANGE COUNTY 5K-9 ANDREW HEANEY

Andrew Heaney this summer hosted the second annual ‘Pup Cup Orange County 5K-9’ at Lakeview Park in Silverado. Pup Cup 5k-9 is the only race where you can run with the encouragement of your favorite K-9 companion!

This year’s Impact Partner is The Children’s Hospital at Orange County (CHOC) Resident Dog Therapy Program and Awareness Partner, OC Animal Care. Heaney and the Pup Cup were able to help provide funding for three full-time therapy dogs that will be joining the hospital this fall.

“My wife and I, we love dogs. We have two black labs who we can’t imagine life without. Sadie and Charlie are therapeutic for me and bring balance and peace to my life.” Heaney said. “By helping dogs, we help humans, especially through supporting dog therapy programs in children’s hospitals like CHOC. Those dogs and their handlers make a world of difference for kids going through sometimes painful and scary experiences.”

The event featured local dog-friendly and fitness-oriented vendors, music, food trucks and more. Each runner received a Pup Cup t-shirt, finisher medal and dog bandana.

Said Adam Cali, Manager, Foundation and Community Initiatives for the Angels: “We had a great time. So many people from our clubhouse staff to our front office staff to our players were out here with their dogs and running and supporting the therapy program at CHOC.”

“For those kids to cuddle up with a dog even for the briefest moment, it makes you feel better,” said Heaney. “I wanted to bring that to them and make it full-time.”

BROAD STREET GUBIE

BY PETE DONOVAN

Mark Gubicza is many things. A former 20-game winner, a two-time All-Star and a World Champion all with the Kansas City Royals. A member of the Royals' Hall of Fame as well as the Missouri Hall of Fame and the Pennsylvania Hall of Fame (more on that later).

He's also a frequent and reliable Twitter user. Gubie, as he is known to almost everyone, has been the color analyst on Angels telecasts for the past 13 seasons.

But Mark Gubicza is also a huge fan of all the sports teams in Philadelphia. Growing up in Philly (he attended William Penn Charter School), he naturally gravitated to the local pro teams.

He is the ultimate Philly Fanatic!

"We played outside, about 14 or 15 of us, all the time, no matter the weather," he said recently. "Snow, rain, cold, heat we played.

We would even burn the garbage in the garbage can to give us some heat when it was freezing."

It was the Phillies, the Eagles, the 76ers and the Flyers. "I loved them all the same," he said.

Gubie easily recites the heroes of his youth — "Smitty, Carlton, Boonie, Dr. J, Andrew Toney, Ron Jaworski, Harold Carmichael. He added: "I was tall (he eventually grew to 6-6) so I would be Harold Carmichael in the football season. Going high in the end zone to catch passes.

"We played baseball in the summer, hockey and football in the winter and basketball all the time. Philly is a basketball town."

It is not only the stars, Gubicza admired. He was a fan of Andrew Toney of the 76ers who he and his buddies labeled "The Boston Strangler” because of his success against the dreaded Celtics.

The Phillies had Mike Schmidt and Steve Carlton and Greg Luzinski and Bob Boone, plus Pete Rose later on (“he brought grit to the team,” said Gubicza). But he also was a big fan of guys like Manny Trillo (a second baseman) and Bake McBride (an outfielder).

His connection to Boone, the Philly catcher, grew to be something special. Bob Boone eventually caught in Kansas City for a young Gubicza and then managed the team. Boone’s two young kids, Brett and Aaron, ran around the ballpark in Kansas City. Aaron, of course, is now the manager of the Yankees.

Gubicza’s biggest thrill, he said, was in the sixth game of the 1980 World Series. “My Dad and I got good tickets from Ruben Amaro. His sons were classmates of mine in high school. We were right there when Boonie dropped a popup and Rose caught it. My Dad and I hugged, something we didn’t usually do. It was fantastic.

“I got to meet most of those guys over the course of my career. I was out of my mind when I met Steve Carlton and I still stay in touch with Pete Rose,” he said.

Growing up in Philly, he was more than a fan, of course.

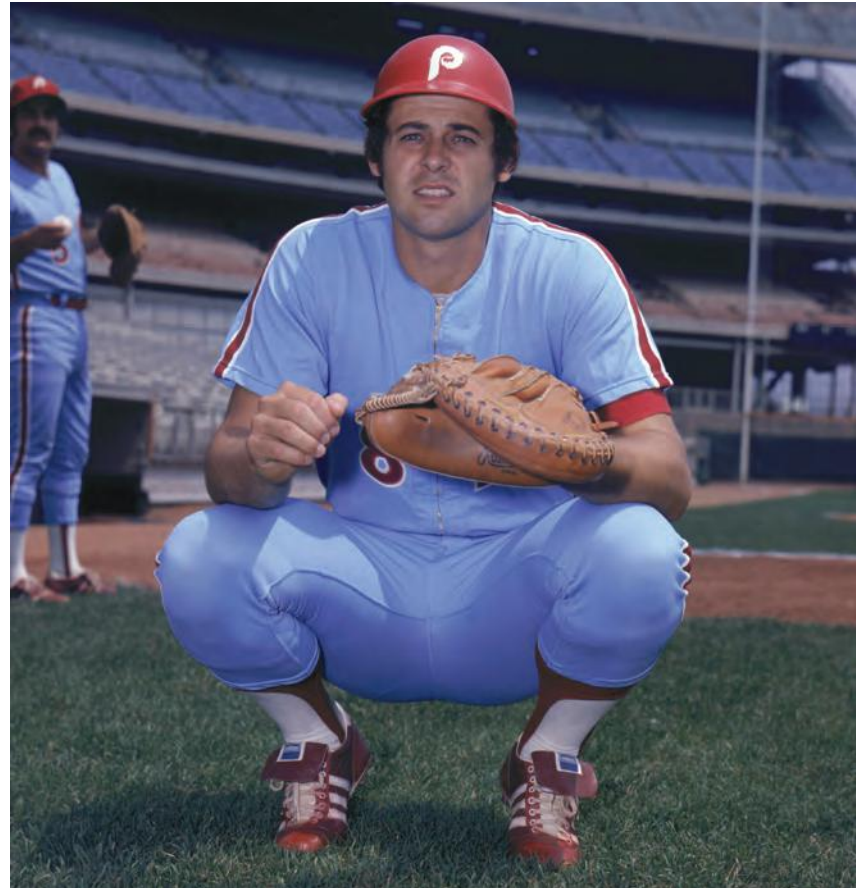

“I learned to be incredibly competitive,” he said of playing in Philly as a kid.

Two years ago, Mike Trout another huge Philly fan, invited Gubicza to an Eagles game when on a day the Angels were off. “A huge thank you to Mike Trout for letting me tag along to watch the Eagles. Amazing view,” Gubicza tweeted.

In 2008 when the Phillies won the World Series, Gubicza was famously watching the final game at his home in Chatsworth with an autographed Shane Victorino jersey on!

He’s known for his popular “Gubie Tuesdays” where he interviews members of the Angels about such diverse subjects as toughest player you ever face, which band would you like to be in or favorite restaurants on the road (Gubie’s are Union Oyster House in Boston and Del Frisco’s in New York for the record).

He spent nearly every day of his 14-year major league career with the Royals (he was traded to the Angels in 1997, but hardly threw a pitch for them). In 1985, he was part of the Royals team that won the World Series, and just three years later he went 20-8 and made the first of two consecutive All-Star Game appearances. His 132 wins are third most in Kansas City history behind Paul Splittorff and Dennis Leonard.

Remarkably, in all those years, he never once batted in a major league game.

Gubicza, who turned 57 on Aug. 14, joined FOX Sports West in 2002 and in 2010 he teamed with Victor Rojas in the TV booth. He now watches the Angels on a daily basis, but with one eye always on the scoreboard to check in on the Philly teams.

ANGEL FUTURE IS IN NICE - AS IN THAISS - HANDS

BY PETE DONOVAN

In 2001, at the age of 21, Albert Pujols, playing for the St. Louis Cardinals, hit 37 home runs, drove in 130, hit .329 and was named the National League Rookie of the Year.

In Jackson Township, New Jersey, Matt Thaiss turned six.

In 2013, Pujols, in his second season with the Angels, was approaching 500 career home runs. Thaiss, a senior in high school, was drafted by the Boston Red Sox in the 32nd round.

In 2016, Pujols drove in 119 runs and Thaiss was drafted in the first round by the Angels out of the University of Virginia where he hit .380 with only 16 strikeouts in 59 games.

But here in 2019, Pujols and Thaiss find themselves as teammates and sharing the same position for the Angels - First Base.

The confluence of these two players at this particular time, is a story as old as the game itself. In with the new, out with the old. Pujols is now 39 and nearing the end of a brilliant Hall of Fame career; Thaiss is 24 and beginning a Major League journey that he could only hope would come close to replicating the one that Pujols has carved out.

"It's really cool to be splitting time with a guy I grew up watching and idolizing," said Thaiss. "I would play video games that he starred in. He's a guy who knows so much about the game and about the position we play. He's one of the best ever. I can learn so much from him...talking to him and watching him."

One thing we know for sure about Matt Thaiss (pronounced Thice) is that he improves, both offensively and defensively. Witness his draft status from a 32nd rounder out of high school to rounder out of college.

At Virginia, he hit .339 over three seasons, highlighted by a .380 average (compared to .265 in his first year) in his final season with a gaudy on-base percentage of .473. The 2015 Cavaliers won the College World Series, the lone title in the school's history.

Through his minor league career with the Angels, he was a consistent hitter in the .280 range and his power increased with 16 homers last season and 14 more in a little more than half a season this year before he was called to the Angels.

In Spring Training this year he hit .372 and the Angels noticed.

"We know he can hit," said Manager Brad Ausmus.

Drafted as a catcher, he had been switched to first base, but the Angels were in more need of another infield position — third base. So Thaiss got another glove.

"The ground balls that were hitting me in the chest — it's a lot different than first base," Thaiss said. "There were some growing pains, some challenges when I first started over there. It's kind of smoothed out."

Thaiss's early contributions were significant. When Taylor Cole and Felix Pena combined for a no-hitter in July, it was a sparkling defensive play by Thaiss — at third base — that preserved the no-no.

He then hit a three-run homer against Seattle to give the Angels a come-from-behind win on July 14 and two weeks later had a two-homer game against the Orioles, the last one winning the game. Thaiss, who signed for a $2.15 million bonus when drafted, had five home runs in an 11-game stretch, splitting time between first and third.

"Every game you can help contribute, help do your job for your team, it's good for your confidence," he said.

"He's had an unbelievable season at Triple-A," Angels center fielder Mike Trout told J.P. Hoornstra of the Southern California News Group. "He deserves to be up here. You saw it tonight with a big hit, a game-winning hit (the three homer game vs. Seattle). The at-bat before that, he was the go-ahead run.

"I'm just happy for him. He works hard every day. He came up big for us."

The 24-year-old Thaiss is one of two former Virginia Cavaliers on the 2019 Angels roster. Outfielder Jarrett Parker, had 21 home runs through 79 games in Salt Lake, the organization's Triple-A affiliate.

Thaiss is one of the young guns the Angels are counting on moving forward. Infielders David Fletcher (24) and Luis Rengifo (22) have shown they belong in the bigs and there is, of course, Shohei Ohtani, who is only 25. With fast-rising prospect Jo Adell (20) nearly ready to join the major league team, the Angel future is in nice — as in Thaiss — hands.

Club General Manager Billy Eppler said of Thaiss and other young players: "They're handling the responsibility and I feel good about how they've developed and how they are competing and learning and growing. They feel like guys we'll be able to trust right now and also as we move later into the seasons and future seasons."

THE BIG

The 2019 season marks the Halos' 54th season at Angel Stadium, their home for 53 of their 58 seasons. After spending their first five years of existence playing at Wrigley Field and Chavez Ravine, the Angels landed in their new home in Orange County. Since opening the doors for its first exhibition game Apr. 9, 1966, Angel Stadium has played host to some of the Club's memorable events including seven Western Division clinching games (1979, 1982, 1986, 2007, 2008, 2009 and 2014), three All-Star Games (1967, 1989 and 2010) and the 2002 World Series, including the Angels' Game 7 victory over the San Francisco Giants to clinch the franchise's first championship. Angel Stadium has also seen several individual Halos leave their indelible marks on the game of baseball. Whether it be the four Angels no-hitters, Rod Carew's 3,000th hit, Reggie Jackson's 500th home run, Don Sutton's 300th win or Albert Pujols' 600th home run, Angel Stadium has housed some of Major League Baseball's most prestigious accomplishments.

Presently, Angel Stadium sits as baseball's fourth-oldest ballpark, trailing only Boston's Fenway Park, Chicago's Wrigley Field and Los Angeles' Dodger Stadium. Affectionately known as "The Big A", Angel Stadium has seen over 119 million fans pass through its gates since 1966, including a current stretch of 16 consecutive seasons of three million fans, a streak only the Angels and Yankees have achieved since 2003.

After an Aug. 31, 1964 groundbreaking ceremony, Anaheim Stadium, as it was originally known, was completed in 1966 at a cost of $24 million. The facility's centerpiece was a giant A-frame scoreboard standing 230 feet high and was the source of the stadium's nickname.

With a seating capacity of 43,250, Anaheim Stadium was built with "Convenience, Comfort and Courtesy" in mind. Narrow foul territory areas and quickly rising decks gave fans an up-close view of the action. Gradually inclined ramps, escalators, wide aisles and helpful ushers as well as three surrounding freeways, 26 entrance lanes and 28 exit lanes added to the Big A's accessibility.

Anaheim Stadium underwent construction to enclose the stadium in 1979 for additional seating to accommodate the Rams' football games. Seating capacity was increased to 64,593 for baseball and more than 70,000 for football. A total of 108 executive style boxes were added to surround the rear of the Club Level. In addition to the Stadium Club, there were two other private dining areas designed for groups — the Stadium Pavilion and the Football Press Box.

At that time, the Big A board was preserved and moved to the edge of the parking lot adjacent to the Orange Freeway behind the right field area.

When the Rams left for St. Louis, Anaheim Stadium's primary tenant remained the Angels, who originally signed a 35-year contract (through 2001). Renovations began Oct. 1, 1996, to revert the 30-year old structure back to a baseball only facility and the ballpark was renamed Edison International Field. The total cost for the stadium renovation was estimated at $100 million and the project was completed in time for the Angels' Opening Day, Apr. 1, 1998. New enhancements were added all around the ballpark but perhaps the most noticeable is the center field waterfalls and rock formation that come together to form an "A". Settled inside the waterfall's rapids are water geysers that originally shot water into the air whenever an Angels player hit a home run.

Other unique features of Angel Stadium include terraced bullpens in the outfield, widened concourses, new restroom and concession areas, family-oriented seating sections, state-of-the-art club-level and dugout-level suites, a youth-oriented interactive game area and landscaped courtyards (with statues in remembrance of Gene Autry and Michelle Carew).

In addition, Angel Stadium includes two full-service restaurants: The St. Archer Brewing Co. Club (a sports bar located at the club level down the right field line) and The Lexus Diamond Club (an upscale restaurant with outdoor seating on the field level behind home plate). In 2014, the newest luxury seating area was added to the ballpark with the opening of HALO, now known as the Don Julio Club.

During the 2016 and 2017 offseasons, Angel Stadium underwent several major upgrades. The first round of improvements began immediately following the 2016 season when a new state of the art LED stadium light system was installed. The following offseason, Angel Stadium received one of its largest technological enhancements to date. In Oct., 2017, the Angels partnered with Daktronics to bring 14 LED displays, including two new video boards in both left and right field to Angel Stadium. At the time it was installed, the right field display was the third largest in Major League Baseball at 9,500 square feet and features 7.7 million LEDs. Eight ribbon displays totaling 1,168 feet in length were also installed along the seating fascia to provide additional statistics and graphics. The largest of these included the entire fascia length along the first and third baselines. Finally, a new out-of-town scoreboard replaced the existing board on the right field wall. All total, the Club added more than 23,000 square feet of new LED displays to their home venue.

Also installed prior to the 2018 season was a new state-of-the-art sound system. The main seating bowl now has 300 speakers plus more than 50 subwoofers and is powered by 200,000 watts.

With the enhancements made throughout the course of the past several years, Angel Stadium proudly maintains the title of the fourth-oldest ballpark in the Majors while offering its guests access to some of the latest technological amenities. As a result, Angel Stadium continues to be one of Southern California's most unique sports venues.

Nestled in the corner of the Angel Stadium parking lot is one of the ballpark's most recognizable features, "The Big A" message board. With the completion of Anaheim Stadium in 1966, the facility's centerpiece was a giant A-frame scoreboard standing 230 feet high. At the time, it was the largest scoreboard ever constructed and became the source of the stadium's nickname. The Big A's original home was just beyond the left field wall where it served as the facility's main scoreboard for over a decade. When the stadium underwent construction to accommodate the Los Angeles Rams in 1979, The Big A was preserved and moved to its current location in the southeastern corner of the parking lot, adjacent to the 57 freeway. Contractors used a 125-ton crane and two large dollies to move the structure over 1,200 feet across the stadium lots.

The Angels have long utilized The Big A to celebrate each of the club's victories. After every Angel win, both home and road, the 70-foot wide halo atop the Big A is illuminated for fans both inside the ballpark and out to see. It is customary for the halo to remain lit until dawn of the day following a victory. The Angels are one of the few sports franchises whose post-victory tradition signals a win to all within sight of their facility.

Since its construction in 1966, The Big A has undergone several modifications and facelifts. The scoreboard's original color palette was all white with a gold halo before becoming green, gold and beige when the stadium was renamed Edison Field. In February, 2002, with the club switching their uniform scheme back to red as the primary color, the Big A was painted red and beige. The landmark then underwent additional changes after the 2009 season when the structure was painted all red. A new full-color display was added to the front facade, replacing the former dot-matrix board and a new halo was placed at the top. A third extensive renovation took place prior to the 2018 season as part of Angel Stadium's overall enhancements. The Big A received a new LED marquee, illuminated Angel Stadium sign and a new modernized LED Halo adorned the top of the famed structure.

As it currently sits, the Club has the ability to display full pictures, texts and graphics as well as turn the halo nearly any color it desires. The most commonly displayed colors on the structure's crown are red, white, blue, green and orange.

IN THE BUSINESS COMMUNITY

Chick-fil-A's local ownership means local involvement in the communities they serve

Angels fans in Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino and Ventura Counties are no strangers to Chick-fil-A, and their partnership this season with the Halos. There are 72 restaurants that make up the group known to Angels fans as “Chick-fil-A SoCal.” These are the restaurants that sponsor the “Hittin’ for Chikin” promotion that delights Angel’s attendees with a free Chick-fil-A® Chicken Sandwich every time the hometown sluggers put up seven or more runs during a home game.

What most fans may not know is that each and every Chick-fil-A restaurant is independently owned and operated. Chick-fil-A’s unique model of local ownership not only provides opportunities for partnership with big regional names like the Angels, but it also means that each restaurant Operator has the opportunity to support causes and organizations that are near and dear to the communities where their restaurants are located.

Supporting Children’s Hospitals of Orange County’s CHOC Walk and the National Kidney Foundation through cookie sales, encouraging pediatric cancer patients and their families to never, ever, give up (NEGU) through support to the Jessie Rees Foundation are just a couple.

From spirit nights to merchandise fundraisers, Chick-fil-A Operators support the communities where they live and work. Many local high schools benefit from hosting Chick-fil-A Leader Academy on their campuses; with local restaurant Operators supporting a year-long series of lessons ranging from servant leadership to facing your fears. From high school booster clubs, to elementary school PTAs, to local Boy Scout and Girl Scout troops, the left field bullpen wall is not the only place that Angels fans are able to see a Chick-fil-A banner hanging.

“Partnerships like the one that Chick-fil-A SoCal has with the Angels allow us to capture the hearts of fans in the stadium, then drive traffic to our restaurants where that amazing in-stadium experience aligns with an amazing in-restaurant experience. It’s at that moment when those two worlds collide that we see the magic of the partnership happen.”

ARTE & CAROLE MORENO

OWNERSHIP

In May of 2003, Arte and Carole Moreno were introduced as the third owners in Angels' franchise history and their impact was immediate. The Morenos have guided the franchise to six A.L. West Division titles and 16 consecutive seasons drawing over three million fans, resulting in a total home attendance of nearly 50 million fans. In July of 2018, Arte received the distinct honor of being elected to the Board of Directors for the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum in Cooperstown, NY.

The Moreno's focus is balanced between baseball, business operations and fan experience. In 2009, the Halos were voted the top franchise in professional sports in "Fan Value and Experience" in a fan poll by ESPN the Magazine. In the poll, the Angels ranked in the top three among Major League teams for 10 consecutive seasons (2003-2012).

During their tenure, Arte and Carole's support of the baseball operations department has resulted in the acquisition of many key players, including three-time N.L. MVP Albert Pujols, nine-time Gold Glove Torii Hunter, 2009 World Series MVP Hideki Matsui, 2005 A.L. Cy Young Award winner Bartolo Colon, newly-elected Hall of Famer Vladimir Guerrero, four-time Gold Glove winner Andrelton Simmons and several others. In 2014, the Morenos signed two-time A.L. MVP Mike Trout to a six-year contract extension and committed to a five-year deal with Justin Upton following the 2017 campaign. In December of 2017, two-way player Shohei Ohtani agreed to sign with the Angels after starring in Japan.

Since purchasing the Club on May 22, 2003, the Angels have logged a 1372-1176 record (.538 winning pct.). During the family's tenure, the organization has continued to cultivate players from its farm system. Their dedication has paid dividends in the development of significant current players such as Trout, Gold Glove outfielder Kole Calhoun, David Fletcher, Keynan Middleton, Cam Bedrosian and Jaime Barria.

Over the past 16 years, Carole and Arte have strengthened the Club's commitment to local communities and beyond. In 2004, the Morenos established the Angels Baseball Foundation concentrating on investments in education, health care, arts & sciences and community-related youth programs to experience the positive attributes of baseball. The Foundation distributes annual grants to various youth programs within Southern California. The Angels Scholars program works with the Orange County Office of Education and the college preparatory AVID program to award several annual college scholarships.

In 2010, the Angels were privileged to host their third All-Star Game (also 1967 & 1989). In conjunction with MLB's All-Star Legacy Fund, the foundation funded renovation of softball fields at Anaheim's Pioneer Park (into the MLB Angels All-Star Complex) as well as the special-surfaced field for the Miracle League of Orange County for disabled youth. The Foundation regularly donates tickets, memorabilia and ballpark experiences to the various groups and fundraisers.

In addition to their responsibilities with the Angels and various committees within MLB, the Morenos were part of ownership of the former Single-A Salt Lake Trappers of the Pioneer League. Under their leadership, the Trappers won three championships. Arte and Carole were also original investors in the Arizona Diamondbacks (including their 2001 World Series championship) and in a partnered ownership of the NBA's Phoenix Suns.

The Moreno family is also active in their own philanthropic efforts. In 1997, they established the Moreno Family Foundation to support nonprofit organizations focusing on youth and education as well as investing in educational scholarships in K-8, high school and college. Their favorite charities include St. Vincent de Paul, St. Mary's Food Bank, the Barrow Neurological Institute, Boys & Girls Clubs, UMOM Homeless Shelters, American Heart Association and Fresh Start Women's Foundation. The Morenos were previously members of the Little League Foundation's Board of Trustees, which assists Little Leagues in every state and more than 70 other countries.

Carole was born in Reno, NV, and moved often as the daughter of a career Air Force man. She spent much of her youth in Fredonia, KS, and went on to earn a degree in journalism from the University of Kansas. Arte is a native of Tucson, AZ, and served his country in Vietnam as a member of the U.S. Army. After his tour of duty, he attended the University of Arizona, graduating with a degree in marketing. In 2005, Time Magazine selected Moreno as one of the '25 Most Influential Hispanics in America.' Arte and Carole are the parents of three children.

Mike Trout made his Angels big league debut nearly two years to the exact day the team selected him in the first-round of the 2009 Draft.

Before establishing himself as an everyday player with the Halos in 2013, Trout played in 286 total minor league games across several levels.

In 2011, one season prior to the American League Rookie of the Year campaign, Trout began the season with Double-A Arkansas (Texas League). Before that first call-up to the Angels, Trout played in 75 contests with the Travelers as a 19-year-old, the youngest player on the team that also included future Angels Jett Bandy and Luis Jimenez. Trout with Arkansas that season totaled 91 games played and he added 11 home runs and 33 stolen bases.

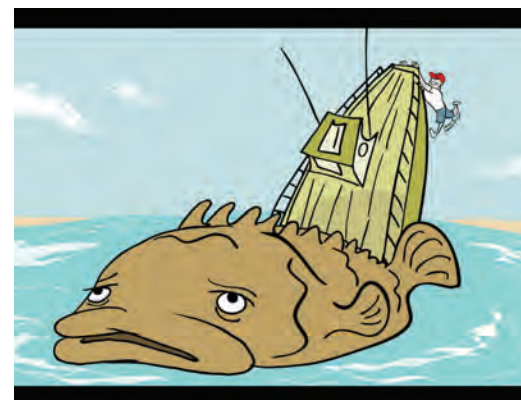

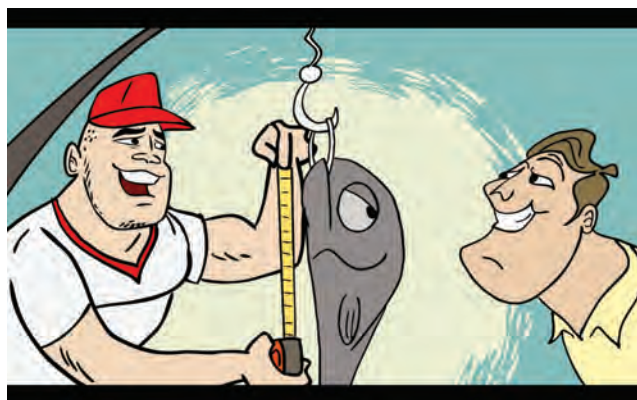

It was also during his time in North Little Rock that he was ranked the No. 1 prospect in baseball by both MLB.com and ESPN.

FOX FOCUS MIKE TROUT

'About Trout' is a new cartoon series that airs on FOX Sports West featuring short, fun interview segments with Mike Trout hosted by Mark Gubicza; debuts bi-weekly on Twitter: @FoxSportsWest

Mark Gubicza: Alright Trouty. You love fishing. Is there one specific place, or one specific fish you've caught, that stands out above anything else considering how much fishing you have done?

Mike Trout: I think my best catch came when I was on a family trip in Key West. We caught a goliath grouper. We had been fishing for bottom fish for awhile and the captain came, and they put a big piece of fish — like a foot, a foot-and-a-half — on the hook. I thought we were going to catch a shark or something. Like 10 minutes later there it goes (the line) and it was an experience just to pull in a fish like that. We worked like a team. I would go for like 20 minutes and then I would pass it on to my brother. We just kept working at it as my wife and my mom sun-tanned at the front of the boat. It took two, three hours as we passed it back between myself, my dad, my brother. You have to be hydrated to catch that fish. You would be cramping, your forearms would be burning. It came in at like 500 pounds. Unbelievable. It was like pulling in a king-size bed. It was a fun, fun time once we got it to near the boat. We could not get it in the boat. It was cool just to see a creature that size, something half the size of the boat. You could see something like that on TV, but seeing it in person was when you could put it into perspective. To be able to be out there, to get your alone time with family and friends, was fun. That was special.

ALBERT PUJOLS BECAME THE LEADER IN CAREER HITS OF ANY FOREIGN-BORN PLAYER IN MAJOR LEAGUE HISTORY WITH HIS 3,167TH CAREER HIT, A MARK HE REACHED LAST MONTH.

ALUMNI SPOTLIGHT SAVING GRACE

As likeable off the field as he was intimidating on it, Lee Smith — who pitched for the Angels for parts of two seasons — closed out his career with a bronze plaque in Cooperstown

BY RICK HUMMEL

Lee Smith pitched for eight big league teams, including the Cubs, who drafted him in 1975. With the Angels in 1995 he was named to the American League All-Star squad and saved 37 games (third most in the junior circuit that season).

His 6-foot-5, 220-pound body seemed twice as big once he stepped onto a pitching mound — and Lee Smith put every ounce of that frame behind a fastball that dominated the ninth inning for decades.

Fortunately for Smith, most of the world didn't know his secret. No one, it seemed, was less like he appeared than Lee Arthur Smith.

"He was a gentle giant," said Hall of Famer Joe Torre, a former Angels broadcaster who managed Smith for almost four seasons when there was no better closer in the game. "If you didn't know him or hadn't played against him or managed against him. . . you'd see this big guy come in and he'd scare the hell out of you. But when you got to know him, he was a vibrant personality.

"You've got to turn the page when you're a closer. You can't live off yesterday's performance whether it be good or bad. He had a perfect temperament for it."

Smith's numbers brought him to the Hall of Fame as a member of the Class of 2019, and many of those are among the best the game has ever seen. He retired following the 1997 season with 478 saves, an MLB record that stood for 13 years. A seven-time All-Star, Smith led his league in saves four times and saved 30-or-more games in 10 of his 18 seasons.

But as famous as Smith was for his slider on the black to right-handed hitters, his capers off the field were almost as storied. He was known to take a nap before he would be called into the game. It was the assistant trainer's job to wake him — or first, locate him.

"There were five or six different places he might be, including where the grounds crew was," said former assistant trainer Brad Henderson of the Cardinals. "Sometimes it took me until about the fifth or sixth inning to find him."

Once in Chicago, Cubs bullpen coach Johnny Oates was dispatched by the manager to get Smith ready. Smith finally was located in the grounds crew room with his head on a pillow, his feet up in the air on a chair and a couple of empty McDonald's boxes on his chest. Cubs starter Greg Maddux, when he wasn't pitching, used to get provisions from the fast-food restaurant which used to be next to Wrigley Field.

Oates politely shook Smith, who awakened and asked, "Who's winning?"

Sometimes Smith wasn't even at the park when people might have been looking for him as the game evolved.

"I'm probably the only guy in Boston who didn't know about the Boston Marathon and the Red Sox playing in the morning," he said. "I'm back at my apartment. I put on my TV and it's the third inning and Bruce Hurst is pitching. I'm saying, 'He didn't pitch yesterday. This isn't any replay.'

"I said, 'Where's my shoes?' I jumped in my car but the roads were closed because of the marathon. So I had to park at the hospital which was eight blocks away. I'm running through the streets and they're thinking I'm running the race, 'I get to the bullpen in the fifth inning and Bill Fischer, the pitching coach, is looking for me. He said, 'Smitty, where you been?'"

Smith responded without missing a beat: "I was in the weight room."

"I wasn't in the ball park for half an hour and I was in the game," Smith said.

Smith was caught off guard by another surprise day game during his one season in Baltimore.

He was fishing and another angler said, "You sure look like that guy who pitches for the Orioles. Don't you guys have a game today?"

Smith responded: "'No, man, it's 7:05.'"

It wasn't. Smith dashed to the ball park and threw on his white shirt. But the Orioles were wearing black tops on this day. When the call came from the dugout for him, Smith unwound himself from the bench to begin warming when it was called to his attention that he was wearing the wrong jersey. A batboy sprinted all the way to the center field bullpen with the right livery.

"My nickname there was 'General Lee,'" said Smith, "and the fans were chanting 'General Lee' while I was putting on my uniform top behind the wall. ESPN used to time me when I was coming into the game and I was at 2 minutes and 40 seconds and I hadn't even broken the warning track yet.

"Remember that guy, [John] Rocker, who used to run onto the field? Hell, he would have two outs before I even got halfway to the mound. In my day, I didn't see anybody running in there to face Mike Schmidt. Mike Schmidt was one of those guys who wanted to make sure I wasn't late to the ballpark."

Schmidt had five homers in 43 at-bats against Smith.

But Smith was serious about his business when it was time to be serious about his business.

Once, in St. Louis, his wife was about to go into labor and he said, "I dropped her off at the hospital on my way to the ballpark because I couldn't miss pitching batting practice. The other guys said, 'Why aren't you going to the hospital? I said, 'I don't know anything about doctors. I'm going to pick up my save and I'll pick her up on the way back."

"She actually had the baby that night. I get a save and I come back to the hospital. And then the next day — you know I'm country as hell — I come back to pick her up to take them home and we had never put a kid into a child seat and I didn't know how to do it. We couldn't take him from the hospital because we didn't know how to put the car seat in. I had to go to the police department to have them put it in."

Smith was concentrating so much on his pitching that night that he hadn't realized that both his sons were about to be born on the same day. "I was just thinking about getting a save that night. I wasn't thinking about the doctoring or the birthday thing," he said.

Cubs Hall of Famer Billy Williams, says Smith, was the one who convinced him that being a reliever rather than a starter would be better for his future. Smith beforehand had considered being in the bullpen a "slap in the face."

Smith's late sister, Bobbie Jean, was his inspiration.

"She didn't play ball but she thought she did," Smith said.

"She taught me life in general. She was like my pitching coach, my mom, my dad, everything," Smith said. "If there was anybody on the face of the earth I wish could be here for this moment, it would be her.

"She'd say, 'Boy, this is a game y'all playing out there. It's not life and death.'

"There are so many guys who have a blown save. . . they'll go punch a wall and break their hand. One time in Chicago, I second-guessed myself and threw a slider when I really wanted to throw a fastball and a guy got a hit off me. I came down into the dugout and there was a water cooler with a helmet on top of it. I threw my glove and it hit that cooler and that helmet, boom, came back and hit me in the mouth. I said, 'OK, that's the end of that.'

"The whole bench is roaring. Hey, you've got some teeth missing, man.' We've never seen you get ticked off like that.' I said, 'You won't see it again.'"

Smith was popular with his teammates wherever he was and he also was very friendly with the support staff, especially the grounds crew at Wrigley Field.

"The grounds crew got time-and-a-half after 4:30 [when Wrigley had no lights]. I made sure they did a little work on the mound after I came in," Smith said. "You got to take your time."

Smith played the game the way he hopes the pitchers he teaches in the San Francisco system can play it.

"I tried to keep myself loose," he said. Through 20 years of minor-league instruction, he said his main message had been "just take the game as it is. Don't put added pressure on yourself. The game is tough enough.

"Kids are trying to be perfectionists. They're trying to throw every pitch 97 miles an hour. I tell them, 'Learn how to add and subtract.' But have fun. I don't think guys are having that much fun anymore. They don't know how quickly your career goes by.

"I played 18 years. It went by so fast. When you're having fun, it goes by so quick."

Besides his rank of third on the all-time saves list at 478, Smith had the distinction of playing for three Hall of Fame managers in one season in St. Louis in 1990 in Whitey Herzog, Red Schoendienst (interim) and Torre.

He said he had learned the most in the majors from Cubs Hall of Fame pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, who earned a living pitching on the outside corner.

Smith said he had heard later in his career from such Hall of Famers as Ozzie Smith and Schmidt that he might have had more than 500 saves if he had thrown inside, Smith said, "That outside corner was my comfort zone. Mike Schmidt said I would have never given up a hit if I had dusted some guys off. I said, 'Now, you tell me. You should have told me that when I was pitching.'"

In 1984, Smith had 21 saves of more than one inning, including three of three innings or more. The next year, Smith had 24 of his 33 saves encompassing more than one inning. Later in his career, he needed to pitch only the one customary inning.

"There's nuthin' better," said Smith, "than waking up with a three-run lead."

BASEBALL BROTHERS

Fletch. The Sequel.

David Fletcher is not the only accomplished baseball player in his family. His brother, Dominic, is now a pro after three standout seasons at the University of Arkansas.

A native of Cypress, the left-handed hitting Dominic Fletcher, an outfielder, recently saw action with the Razorbacks at the College World Series in Omaha. He completed his junior campaign this year hitting .312 with 33 extra base hits.

As a freshman, he won several awards: NCBWA Freshman All-American, Baseball America Freshman All-American and SEC All-Freshman Team. As a sophomore he was honored as follows: SEC All Defensive Team.

Most recently he was selected by the Diamondbacks in the second round of the First-Year Amateur Draft.

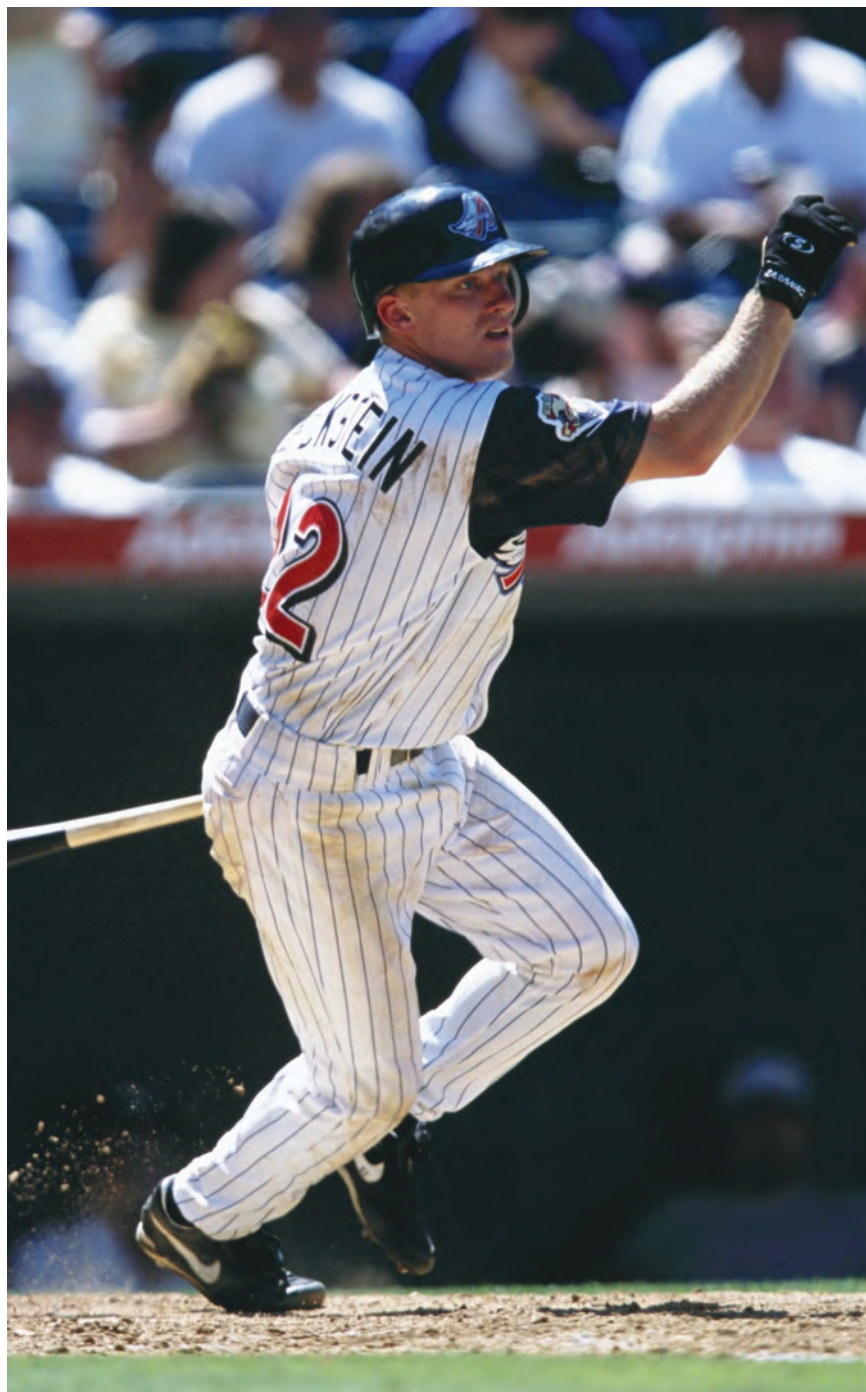

At Cypress High School, Dominic was ranked as the No. 10 outfielder and the No. 82 overall prospect in the nation by Perfect Game. He was also ranked as the No. 4 outfielder and No. 10 overall prospect in the state of California.

David of course is in his second season with the Angels. He too played at Cypress High School before a collegiate career at nearby Loyola Marymount University.

CUT FROM THE SAME CLOTH

The similarities are striking.

Both are relatively small in stature and both are infielders. They bat and throw right-handed, played college baseball and neither were considered prime prospects.

Both play the game the right way. Both are tough to strike out. Both are clutch...and both are gritty.

And, clearly, both are named David!

David Fletcher — an Orange County native who as an eight year old was watching the elder David win a World Series with the Angels in 2002 — and former Angels star David Eckstein seem to be Cut From the Same Cloth indeed.

HEART AND HUSTLE

DAVID FLETCHER

David Fletcher is this year's Angels recipient of the Heart and Hustle Award. This esteemed award honors active players who demonstrate a passion for the game of baseball and best embody the values, spirit and traditions of the game.

The Heart and Hustle Award is also the only award in Major League Baseball that is voted on by former players. One player from each Major League team is chosen by the committees based on their passion, desire and work ethic demonstrated both on and off the field. Each player is then recognized prior to a home game.

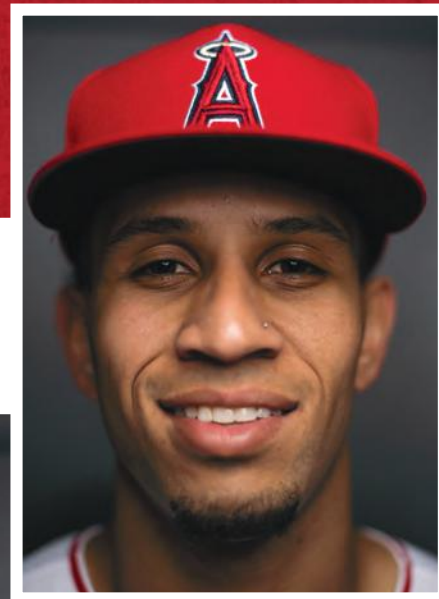

As the season draws to a close, all alumni and active players will vote to select the final winner from the 30 team winners. Previous overall winners have been David Eckstein (2005), Craig Biggio (2006, 2007), Grady Sizemore (2008), Albert Pujols (2009), Roy Halladay (2010), Torii Hunter (2011), Mike Trout (2012), Dustin Pedroia (2013), Josh Harrison (2014), Anthony Rizzo (2015), Todd Frazier (2016), Brett Gardner (2017) and Mookie Betts (2018).

The overall winner is revealed on November 7 at the 20th Annual Legends for Youth Dinner in New York, a fundraiser.

TWO WAY PLAYER(S) JARED WALSH AND SHOHEI OHTANI

THE ANGELS HAVE AS MANY TWO-WAY PLAYERS LISTED ON THEIR CLUB'S OFFICIAL ROSTER AS CATCHERS.

One year after Shohei Ohtani exploded onto the big league stage, excelling on the mound and at the plate en route to American League Rookie of the Year honors, the Angels this season recalled Jared Walsh, a former 39th round selection who pitches in addition to playing first base.

A former standout at the University of Georgia, Walsh in the minor leagues has mostly played first base and in the outfield before last year adding pitching to his resume. In the fall, he went to the instructional league to get formal instruction as a pitcher, a role he had excelled at in college including a 5-2 record and a 2.60 ERA as a junior.

Walsh made his debut with the Angels in mid-May at first base.

The left-handed hitting, left-handed throwing Walsh hit .250 over 11 games. He also saw action on the mound twice before heading back to Triple-A Salt Lake.

Ohtani, meanwhile, is being used exclusively as a designated hitter this season as he recovers from Tommy John Surgery. In late June he threw off a mound for the first time as his rehab continues.

Kaleb Cowart, who previously had seen action with the Angels across four different seasons as an infielder, has worked as a two-play player this season in the Angels minor league system, and in the recently concluded 2019 First-Year Player Draft the Angels selected three two-way players.

THE WRIGHT STUFF

Angels alum Clyde Wright has written a book!

A former 20-game winner for the club, and a long-time contributor to the local baseball community and Angel ambassador, the affable Wright worked with his son Jaret and writer Brian Honea to pen Baseball The Wright Way, which can be purchased at retail book stores, Amazon and online merchants.

“The reason I wrote the book was because people really love baseball stories and everybody knows I always have a story or two to tell. They would always ask for more, and I heard more than once that I should write a book because I had so many,” said Wright.

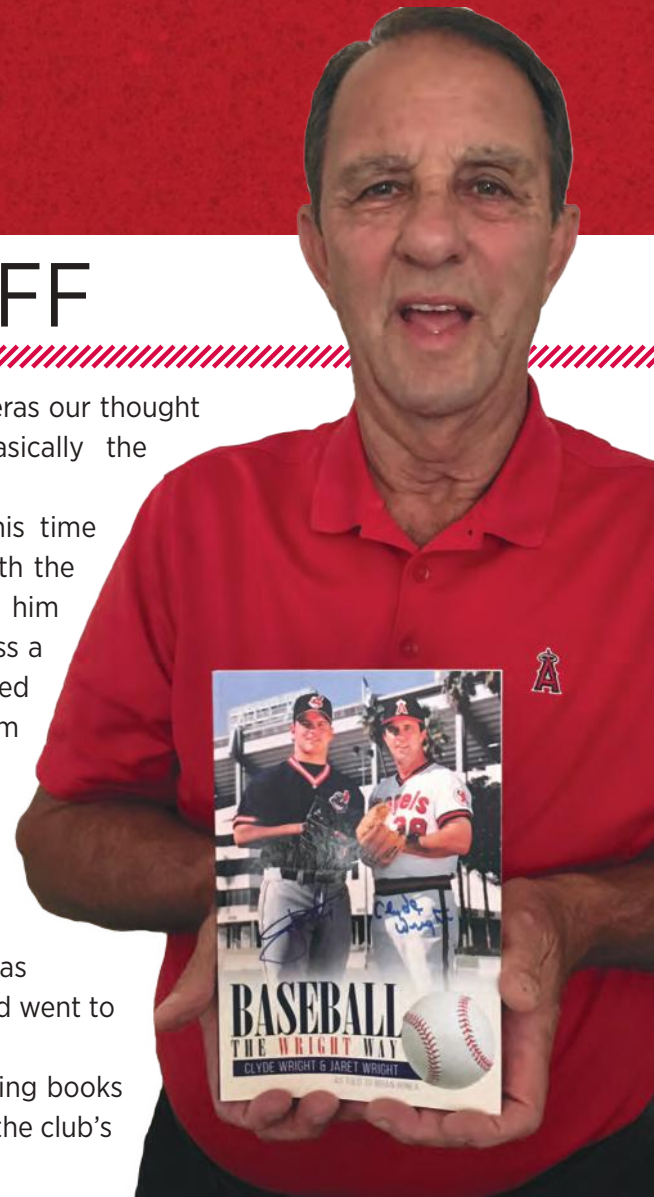

“So when my son, Jaret, was done playing we decided to get together and do it. It was really fun listening to each other’s stories. Comparing differences and similarities and stars of the different eras of baseball. It was interesting, though, that even though we played in different eras our thought processes while pitching were basically the same.”

Clyde won 100 games during his time in the Majors. He was an All-Star with the Halos in 1970 — a season that saw him win 22 games, a career-high, and toss a no-hitter versus Oakland. He first joined the Angels when the club selected him in the 1965 amateur draft.

Jaret pitched for five teams during his 11-year big league career from 1997-07. He pitched in the postseason six times including the 1997 World Series with the Indians as a rookie. He was born in Anaheim and went to Katella High School.

Both Clyde and Jaret will be signing books at Angel Stadium this month during the club’s final regular season homestand.

BONG!

Hansel Robles has used the theme song of The Undertaker this season when summoned from the bullpen. Long used by the wrestling Superstar in WWE, Robles has had a long fascination with the phenom... and the mysterious song.

"I used to love to watch The Undertaker," Robles told Yahoo! Sports. "When I heard the first 'bong' I'd look up. It pumps me all up."

Robles entered this season with three career saves over his first four MLB seasons. As of this writing he had registered 18 this year with the Halos to go along with a 4-0 record.
