CLUB LEVEL

Club MVP*

There have been exactly 19,690 men to play major league baseball.

Few have ever played it better than Michael Nelson Trout.

The resume of the Angels' center fielder continues to grow at a blinding and historic pace. Keep in mind, at 28, Trout is barely half-way through his career, but he has already:

- Won the American League Most Valuable Player Award three times (only Barry Bonds has won more).
- Finished second in the MVP race on four other occasions.
- Captured Rookie of the Year honors in the AL in 2012.
- Named an All-Star eight times and won the MVP of the game twice (no one has won it more).
- Has led the league in on-base percentage the past four seasons.

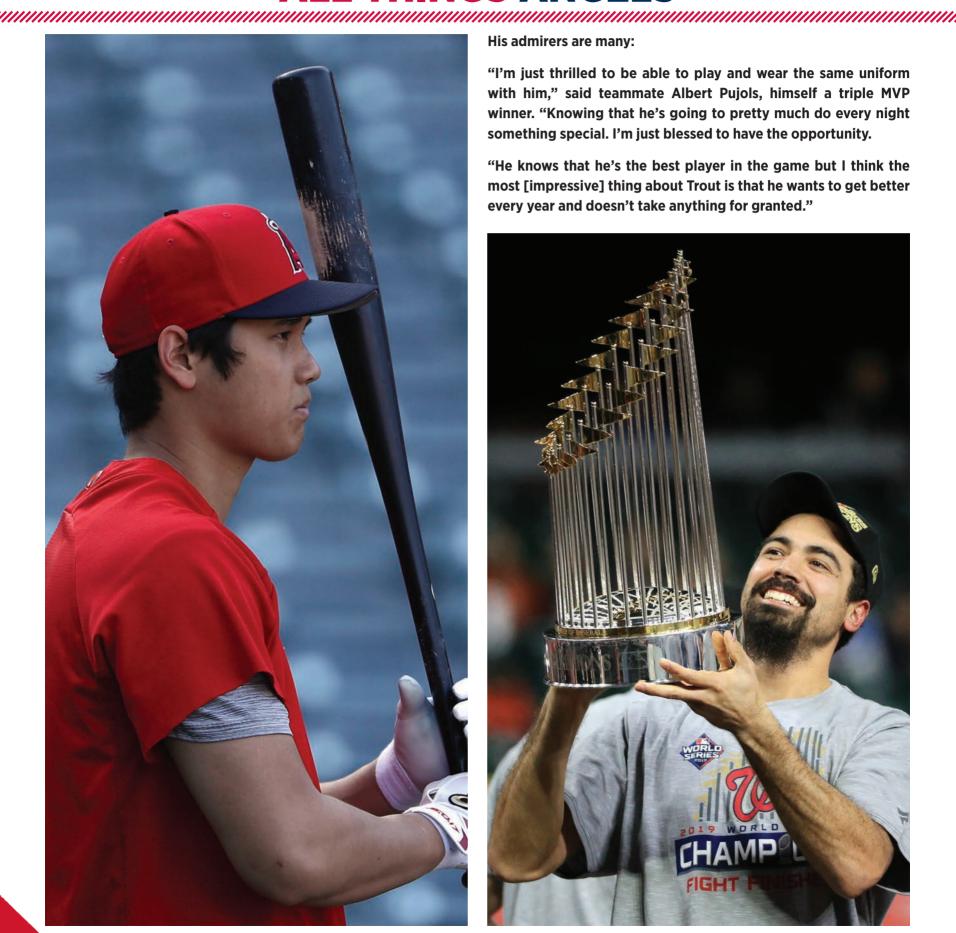

- Was a Gold Glove finalist one season ago.
- The Sporting News Major League Baseball Player of the Decade.

Trout is also the role model for superstars — humble, honest, friendly. A cherished teammate, who is routinely on the top steps of the dugout to congratulate a fellow Angel, a fan favorite who smiles politely, signs scores of autographs and poses with moms and pops of all ages; sons and daughters of all sizes.

His approach to the game remains straight forward. "I just keep thinking about putting up good numbers, playing hard and winning games," he said.

His huge fan base only wishes one thing for the modest Trout — a playoff run leading to the biggest stage in the game in October, the World Series.

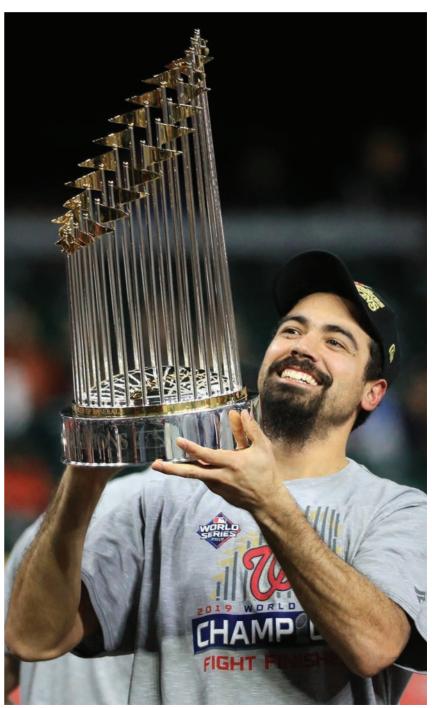

His admirers are many:

"I'm just thrilled to be able to play and wear the same uniform with him," said teammate Albert Pujols, himself a triple MVP winner. "Knowing that he's going to pretty much do every night something special. I'm just blessed to have the opportunity.

"He knows that he's the best player in the game but I think the most [impressive] thing about Trout is that he wants to get better every year and doesn't take anything for granted."

Mike Scioscia managed Trout his first seven seasons in the majors: "People see the highlights, see the home runs, but they sometimes don't see the little things he does every day," he said. "How fast he is, how he covers ground in the outfield and the way he plays defense, the good at-bats he has and the walks he takes. Everything that Mike does, it's incredible. I've never seen a guy with [that] depth of talent."

It has already reached the point where Trout is now the standard in baseball excellence as in "he's going to be the next Mike Trout" is showered on any hot prospect.

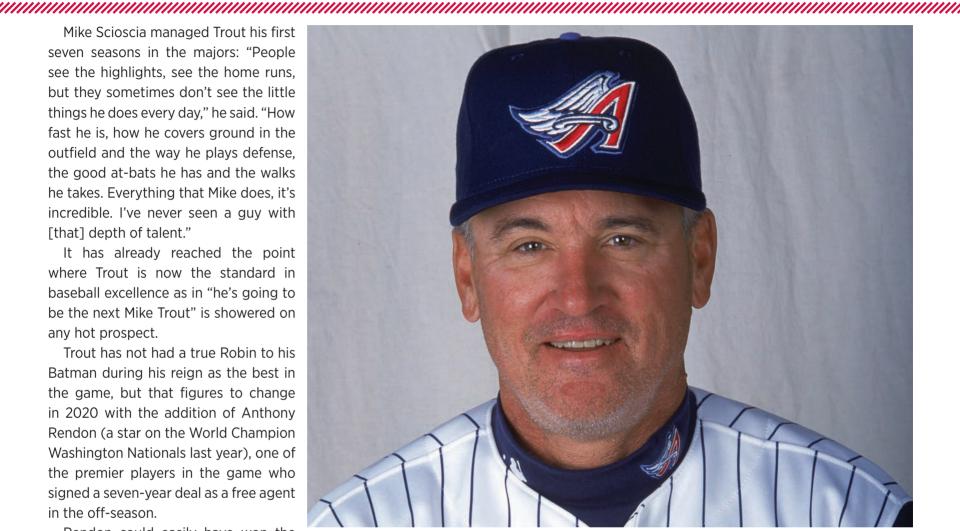

Trout has not had a true Robin to his Batman during his reign as the best in the game, but that figures to change in 2020 with the addition of Anthony Rendon (a star on the World Champion Washington Nationals last year), one of the premier players in the game who signed a seven-year deal as a free agent in the off-season.

Rendon could easily have won the National League MVP in 2019 (he finished third) when he led the majors in RBI with 126, led the National League in doubles with 44, hit 34 home runs and hit .319, his third straight season over .300.

He is also the only player in the Top 15 RBI producers in 2019 not to strike out 100 times.

Rendon will take over third base for the Angels, a position that has been a black hole for much of the past 15 years with 10 different players there on opening day since 2004 (when Troy Glaus left).

The Trout-Rendon combo has already been tabbed as the best 1-2 offensive punch in the game. And there's a good chance they'll hit back-to-back in the order with Trout in his familiar No. 2 slot and Rendon hitting third.

That decision will fall to the new manager, the highly regarded Joe Maddon, who won a World Series with the Cubs of all teams and is returning to the Angels, a franchise he spent 30 years with as a minor league player, scout, coach and manager.

"We are thrilled that Joe is coming back home and bringing an exciting brand of baseball to our fans," general manager Billy Eppler said. "Every stop he has made throughout his managerial career, he has built a culture that is focused on winning while also allowing his players to thrive. We believe Joe will be a great asset for our club and look forward to him leading the team to another World Series championship."

A three-time Manager of the Year, Maddon signed a three-year deal with the Angels following a successful five-year run with the Cubs and nine years managing the Tampa Bay Rays.

Penciling in Trout and Rendon in the middle of the batting order will be one of Maddon's easiest and most enjoyable tasks.

Shohei Ohtani will be a little more challenging. Where to use him and when to use him will be fluctuating decisions are among the many auestions.

Ohtani is SO gifted he can be a top of the rotation starting pitcher and a potential cleanup hitter behind Trout and Rendon.

In his rookie season of 2018, he did each with success, hitting 22 homers and striking out 63 batters in just 51.2 innings. So he can do both, but even when healthy he pitches only once a week and he did not pitch at all in 2019 after undergoing Tommy John surgery late in 2018.

The plan is to go slow with Ohtani. He can bat right away as the designated hitter, but the Angels will monitor his work on the mound in spring training and in early season bullpen sessions. His target date to return to the mound is sometime in mid-May.

Until another injury halted his 2019 season, Ohtani was being productive as the DH, hitting a solid .286 with 18 homers and 20 doubles in only 106 games.

Those are the biggest pieces for the 2020 Angels - Multiple MVP Trout, new slugger Rendon, healthy Ohtani and a manager in Maddon with impeccable credentials.

There is, of course more, Gold Glove shortstop Andrelton Simmons anchors the infield and Justin Upton, who has hit 30 or more homers in a season four times, adds more pop to the offense. Versatile David Fletcher (.290 last year) and first-time All-Star Tommy LaStella (16 home runs in the first half before an injury) give Maddon some options in the infield while Pujols returns for his ninth season under the halo. He's 40 now, but still contributed 23 home runs and 93 RBI a year ago.

New catcher Jason Castro also has power. The lefty swinging Castro hit 13 home runs last season in only 79 games.

Ohtani's return to the mound will help immeasurably. Joining the rotation are innings eaters Dylan Bundy and Julio Teheran. Bundy has had four straight seasons with more than 160 innings pitched while Teheran. twice an All-Star with the Braves. has had seven straight seasons with more than 174 innings pitched. Moreover, both are in their prime - Bundy is 27, Teheran 29.

Hansel Robles returns as the closer after a breakout season in 2019 when he carved out a nifty 2.48 ERA while saving 23 games. The bullpen will also have a number of young, hard-throwing arms — Ty Buttrey, Justin Anderson and Keynan Middleton.

One thing is certain going forward, besides the splendid play of Trout, is that the Angels will be in Anaheim for at least another 30 years, having reached an agreement with the city in early December to buy the stadium and surrounding land.

THE COLLEGE YEARS: MIKE MAYERS

THE BIG A

The 2020 season marks the Halos' 55th season at Angel Stadium, their home for 54 of their 59 seasons. After spending their first five years of existence playing at Wrigley Field and Chavez Ravine, the Angels landed in their new home in Orange County. Since opening the doors for its first exhibition game Apr. 9, 1966, Angel Stadium has played host to some of the Club's memorable events including seven Western Division clinching games (1979, 1982, 1986, 2007, 2008, 2009 and 2014), three All-Star Games (1967, 1989 and 2010) and the 2002 World Series, including the Angels' Game 7 victory over the San Francisco Giants to clinch the franchise's first championship. Angel Stadium has also seen several individual Halos leave their indelible marks on the game of baseball. Whether it be the four Angels no-hitters, Rod Carew's 3,000th hit, Reggie Jackson's 500th home run, Don Sutton's 300th win or Albert Pujols' 600th home run, Angel Stadium has housed some of Major League Baseball's most prestigious accomplishments.

Presently, Angel Stadium sits as baseball's fourth-oldest ballpark, trailing only Boston's Fenway Park, Chicago's Wrigley Field and Los Angeles' Dodger Stadium. Affectionately known as "The Big A", Angel Stadium has seen over 119 million fans pass through its gates since 1966, including a current stretch of 17 consecutive seasons of three million fans, a streak only the Angels and Yankees have achieved since 2003.

After an Aug. 31, 1964 groundbreaking ceremony, Anaheim Stadium, as it was originally known, was completed in 1966 at a cost of $24 million. The facility's centerpiece was a giant A-frame scoreboard standing 230 feet high and was the source of the stadium's nickname.

With a seating capacity of 43,250, Anaheim Stadium was built with "Convenience, Comfort and Courtesy" in mind. Narrow foul territory areas and quickly rising decks gave fans an up-close view of the action. Gradually-inclined ramps, escalators, wide aisles and helpful ushers as well as three surrounding freeways, 26 entrance lanes and 28 exit lanes added to the Big A's accessibility.

Anaheim Stadium underwent construction to enclose the stadium in 1979 for additional seating to accommodate the Rams' football games. Seating capacity was increased to 64,593 for baseball and more than 70,000 for football. A total of 108 executive style boxes were added to surround the rear of the Club Level. In addition to the Stadium Club, there were two other private dining areas designed for groups — the Stadium Pavilion and the Football Press Box.

At that time, the Big A board was preserved and moved to the edge of the parking lot adjacent to the Orange Freeway behind the right field area.

When the Rams left for St. Louis, Anaheim Stadium's primary tenant remained the Angels, who originally signed a 35-year contract (through 2001).

THE BIGA COMMINION OF THE BIGARDON OF THE BIGA

Renovations began Oct. 1, 1996, to revert the 30-year old structure back to a baseball only facility and the ballpark was renamed Edison International Field. The total cost for the stadium renovation was estimated at $100 million and the project was completed in time for the Angels' Opening Day, Apr. 1, 1998. New enhancements were added all around the ballpark but perhaps the most noticeable is the center field waterfalls and rock formation that come together to form an "A". Settled inside the waterfall's rapids are water geysers that originally shot water into the air whenever an Angels player hit a home run.

Other unique features of Angel Stadium include terraced bullpens in the outfield, widened concourses, new restroom and concession areas, family-oriented seating sections, state-of-the-art club-level and dugout-level suites, a youth-oriented interactive game area and landscaped courtyards (with statues in remembrance of Gene Autry and Michelle Carew).

In addition, Angel Stadium includes two full-service restaurants: The St. Archer Brewing Co. Club (a sports bar located at the club level down the right field line) and The Lexus Diamond Club (an upscale restaurant with outdoor seating on the field level behind home plate). In 2014, the newest luxury seating area was added to the ballpark with the opening of HALO, now known as the Don Julio Club.

During the 2016 and 2017 offseasons, Angel Stadium underwent several major upgrades. The first round of improvements began immediately following the 2016 season when a new state of the art LED stadium light system was installed. The following offseason, Angel Stadium received one of it's largest technological enhancements to date. In Oct., 2017, the Angels partnered with Daktronics to bring 14 LED displays, including two new video boards in both left and right field to Angel Stadium. At the time it was installed, the right field display was the third largest in Major League Baseball at 9,500 square feet and features 7.7 million LEDs. Eight ribbon displays totaling 1,168 feet in length were also installed along the seating fascia to provide additional statistics and graphics. The largest of these included the entire fascia length along the first and third baselines. Finally, a new out-of-town scoreboard replaced the existing board on the right field wall. All total, the Club added more than 23,000 square feet of new LED displays to their home venue.

Also installed prior to the 2018 season was a new state-of-the art sound system. The main seating bowl now has 300 speakers plus more than 50 subwoofers and is powered by 200,000 watts.

With the enhancements made throughout the course of the past several years, Angel Stadium proudly maintains the title of the fourth-oldest ballpark in the Majors while offering its guests access to some of the latest technological amenities. As a result, Angel Stadium continues to be one of Southern California's most unique sports venues.

Nestled in the corner of the Angel Stadium parking lot is one of the ballpark's most recognizable features, "The Big A" message board. With the completion of Anaheim Stadium in 1966, the facility's centerpiece was a giant A-frame scoreboard standing 230 feet high. At the time, it was the largest scoreboard ever constructed and became the source of the stadium's nickname. The Big A's original home was just beyond the left field wall where it served as the facility's main scoreboard for over a decade. When the stadium underwent construction to accommodate the Los Angeles Rams in 1979, The Big A was preserved and moved to its current location in the southeastern corner of the parking lot, adjacent to the 57 freeway. Contractors used a 125-ton crane and two large dollies to move the structure over 1.200 feet across the stadium lots.

The Angels have long utilized The Big A to celebrate each of the club's victories. After every Angel win, both home and road, the 70-foot wide halo atop the Big A is illuminated for fans both inside the ballpark and out to see. It is customary for the halo to remain lit until dawn of the day following a victory. The Angels are one of the few sports franchises whose post-victory tradition signals a win to all within sight of their facility.

Since its construction in 1966, The Big A has undergone several modifications and facelifts. The scoreboard's original color palette was all white with a gold halo before becoming green, gold and beige when the stadium was renamed Edison Field. In February, 2002, with the club switching their uniform scheme back to red as the primary color, the Big A was painted red and beige. The landmark then underwent additional changes after the 2009 season when the structure was painted all red. A new full-color display was added to the front facade, replacing the former dot-matrix board and a new halo was placed at the top. A third extensive renovation took place prior to the 2018 season as part of Angel Stadium's overall enhancements. The Big A received a new LED marquee, illuminated Angel Stadium sign and a new modernized LED Halo adorned the top of the famed structure.

As it currently sits, the Club has the ability to display full pictures, texts and graphics as well as turn the halo nearly any color it desires. The most commonly displayed colors on the structure's crown are red, white, blue, green and orange.

ANGELS. IN THE BUSINESS COMMUNITY

Two-thirds of Americans own at least one pet, which equates to more than two million pets right here in Orange County. Brea-based Nationwide pet insurance has been protecting America's pets since 1982. In fact, Nationwide is the largest provider of pet insurance in the U.S., insuring more than 800,000 dogs and cats as well as pet birds and other exotic critters.

"Pets are tried and true family members," said Heidi Sirota, Nationwide's Chief Pet Officer. "Just as we visit the doctor for check-ups and medical attention, our pets need similar care from their veterinarian, and that is where we can help."

From vaccinations and wellness visits to veterinary care for ear infections, skin allergies, diabetes, cancer and other illnesses and injuries, Nationwide pet insurance provides nose to tail medical coverage for your pets to help make vet visits more affordable, and they have been doing it better than anyone else for nearly four decades.

"April 8 marks our 38th anniversary of protecting pets from our headquarters right here in Orange County," said Sirota. "The company was known as Veterinary Pet Insurance when it was started in Anaheim by a group of veterinary professionals. In 2001, we moved our headquarters to Brea, where we have been based ever since."

Nationwide pet insurance is also offered as an employee benefit at hundreds of Southern California companies. To learn more about Nationwide pet insurance and to find out if your company offers it

ARTE & CAROLE MORENO

OWNERSHIP

In May of 2003, Arte and Carole Moreno were introduced as the third owners in Angels' franchise history and their impact was immediate. The Morenos have guided the franchise to six A.L. West Division titles and 17 consecutive seasons drawing over three million fans, resulting in a total home attendance of over 52 million fans. In July of 2018, Arte received the

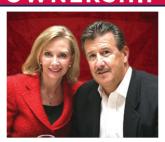

The Moreno's focus is balanced between baseball, business operations and fan experience. In 2009, the Halos were voted the top franchise in professional sports in "Fan Value and Experience" in a fan poll by ESPN the Magazine. In the poll, the Angels ranked in the top three among Major League teams for 10 consecutive seasons (2003-2012).

During their tenure, Arte and Carole's support of the baseball operations department has resulted in the acquisition of many key players, including three-time N.L. MVP Albert Pujols, perennial MVP candidate Anthony Rendon, nine-time Gold Glover Torii Hunter, 2009 World Series MVP Hideki Matsui, 2005 A.L. Cy Young Award winner Bartolo Colon, Hall of Famer Vladimir Guerrero, four-time Gold Glove winner Andrelton Simmons and several others. In 2019, the Morenos signed three-time A.L. MVP Mike Trout to a 12-year contract extension, and most lucrative in North American sports history. The contract will effectively keep the eight-time All-Star a member of the Halos for the remainder of his career. Additionally, in December of 2017, the Moreno's oversaw the successful recruitment of two-way player Shohei Ohtani, the offseason's most highly sought after free agent.

Since purchasing the Club on May 22, 2003, the Angels have logged a 1,444-1,266 record (.533 winning pct.) while boasting a Top 10 payroll in 15 of their 18 seasons, including six campaigns in the Top 5. During the family's tenure, the organization has continued to cultivate players from its farm system. Their dedication has paid dividends in the development of significant current players such as Trout, David Fletcher, Griffin Canning, Justin Anderson, Keynan Middleton, Cam Bedrosian and Jaime Barria.

Over the past 17 years, Carole and Arte have strengthened the Club's commitment to local communities and beyond. In 2004, the Morenos established the Angels Baseball Foundation concentrating on investments in education, health care, arts & sciences and community-related youth programs to experience the positive attributes of baseball. The Foundation distributes annual grants to various youth programs within Southern California. The Angels Scholars program works with the Orange County Office of Education and the college preparatory AVID program to award several annual college scholarships. Since purchasing the Club in 2003, the Moreno's, Angels and Angels Baseball Foundation have contributed over $20 million dollars to various charitable efforts with a primary focus in the Orange County area.

In 2010, the Angels were privileged to host their third All-Star Game (also 1967 & 1989). In conjunction with MLB's All-Star Legacy Fund, the foundation funded renovation of softball fields at Anaheim's Pioneer Park (into the MLB Angels All-Star Complex) as well as the special-surfaced field for the Miracle League of Orange County for disabled youth. The Foundation regularly donates tickets, memorabilia and ballpark experiences to the various groups and fundraisers.

In addition to their responsibilities with the Angels and various committees within MLB, the Morenos were part of ownership of the former Single-A Salt Lake Trappers of the Pioneer League. Under their leadership, the Trappers won three championships. Arte and Carole were also original investors in the Arizona Diamondbacks (including their 2001 World Series championship) and in a partnered ownership of the NBA's Phoenix Suns.

The Moreno family is also active in their own philanthropic efforts. In 1997, they established the Moreno Family Foundation to support nonprofit organizations focusing on youth and education as well as investing in educational scholarships in K-8, high school and college. Their favorite charities include St. Vincent de Paul, St. Mary's Food Bank, the Barrow Neurological Institute, Boys & Girls Clubs, UMOM Homeless Shelters, American Heart Association and Fresh Start Women's Foundation. The Morenos were previously members of the Little League Foundation's Board of Trustees, which assists Little Leagues in every state and more than 70 other countries. For her continued philanthropic efforts, Carole Moreno was honored by the Girl Scouts of Orange County as their 2019 G.I.R.L. (Go-Getter, Innovator, Risk-Taker, Leader) honoree.

Carole was born in Reno, NV, and moved often as the daughter of a career Air Force man. She spent much of her youth in Fredonia, KS, and went on to earn a degree in journalism from the University of Kansas. Arte is a native of Tucson, AZ, and served his country in Vietnam as a member of the U.S. Army. After his tour of duty, he attended the University of Arizona, graduating with a degree in marketing. In 2005, Time Magazine selected Moreno as one of the '25 Most Influential Hispanics in America.' Arte and Carole are the parents of three children.

ONE QUESTION WITH BILLY EPPLER

Over the course of a very long baseball season, you are going to win a lot of games and you are going to lose a lot of games. How do you try and balance the winning with the losing?

"It is about being calm. It is about showing calmness. Whether it is in victory or in defeat I try and do my best to and treat those two imposters as the same."

ANGELS COACHING STAFF

Joe Maddon is in his first season as Angels manager.

He spent the first 30 seasons of his professional baseball career as a member of the Angels organization. After departing the Halos prior to the 2006 season to manage Tampa Bay, Maddon has amassed a 1,252-1,068 (.540) managerial record with eight postseason berths, capturing two pennants (2008 and 2016) and one World Series title (2016).

Additionally, he has been named Manager of the Year on three different occasions, earning the honors with Tampa Bay in 2008 and 2011 and in 2015 with the Cubs.

Club to four straight postseason appearances and his 471 wins rank fifth in club annals.

Joe was tabbed as the fourth manager in Tampa Bay Rays history after taking over for Lou Piniella prior to the 2006 season. Under his nine-year tutelage, the Rays went 754-705 (.517) and made four different trips to the playoffs (2008, 2010, 2011 and 2013).

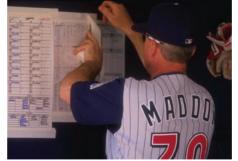

In 2008, he led the franchise to their first ever postseason appearance and guided the Rays to a World Series appearance against the Philadelphia Phillies. Following the season, he received the first of his three Manager of the Year honors.

Joe spent the first 30 years of his professional baseball career playing and working in various capacities of the Angel organization. He initially signed with the Angels as a free agent catcher and he went on to play parts of four seasons (1976-79) in the club's minor league system before moving to a scouting role.

From 1981-1986, he managed at three different levels of the Halos farm system and then transitioned to the franchise's roving hitting instructor from 1987-93. Then his first stint on a big league coaching staff came in 1994.

After starting the year as the Club's player development manager, he was named the Angels' bullpen coach in May. He was soon elevated to first base coach on manager Marcel Lachemann's staff in 1995 and would serve as bench coach for most of the final 10 years (1996-05) of his Angels career, including six seasons (2000-05) under Mike Scioscia. Additionally, he made two different stints as interim manager for the Halos in 1996 and 1999, posting a 27-24 record (.529).

RESPECT 90

Joe Maddon wasted little time getting reacclimated with the community.

The founder of the Respect 90 Foundation, which provides atrisk children and families opportunities to develop championship attitudes through sports, academics and community involvement, Maddon helped spearhead one of the organization's key initiatives in Thanksmas — a program designed to bring awareness to the fact that homelessness is an issue every day...not only on the holidays.

Maddon and his wife, Jaye, brought Thanksmas to Orange County Rescue Mission, serving a meal to the 200 men, women and children living at Village of Hope.

Maddon said he first witnessed the plight of the homeless in Orange County nearly 20 years ago while he was a coach with the Angels. Together with Jaye he launched the Respect 90° Foundation and Thanksmas initiative, which has delivered more than 13,000 meals, as well as supplies and grants to homeless shelters in Tampa, Chicago and Joe's hometown of Hazleton, PA for more than 11 years.

RESPECT 90

In the spring, in collaboration with the Angels Baseball Foundation, Maddon's Respect 90 Foundation hosted another special event in support of patients with pediatric cancer. Balding All Angels took place on March 9 in the Tempe Diablo Stadium parking lot.

"As a father and a grandparent, this event allows me to do something that will impact the children," said Maddon. "This is my ninth year hosting this event to raise money for pediatric cancer. I hope that events like this will help create awareness so that more people can become involved."

During that event, participants who donated $100 were brought up front to have their head shaved or buzzed as a sign of support to the children battling pediatric cancer. In addition to the new hairstyle, participants received a limited edition Balding All Angels t-shirt.

Mike Trout received the 2019 American League Most Value Player Award during the 2020 Baseball Writers' Association of America awards dinner in New York.

"I want to thank the members of the BBWAA for this tremendous honor. I want you to know that I share the same respect and appreciation for what you do on a daily basis for what you have shown me.

"The time I attended this dinner in 2013 I remember what a humbling feeling it was. I have those same feelings now. Winning an MVP never gets old. It was important to me then and it remains important to me now.

"To my beautiful wife Jessica. You have no idea how thankful I am to have you in my life. Thank you for sharing this amazing journey. You have always been my strength through the hard times. I can't thank you enough. I love you." - Mike Trout

AWARDS DINNER

JERRY SEINFELD

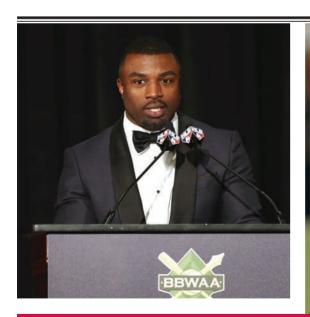

"There are two things in this world to me, and that is life and that is baseball. One helps you get through the other and I love everyone associated with the game. It somehow keeps us going."

BRIAN WESTBROOK

Eagles Running Back, 2002-09

"To hear I was one of Mike Trout's idols growing up, really makes me feel like an old man.

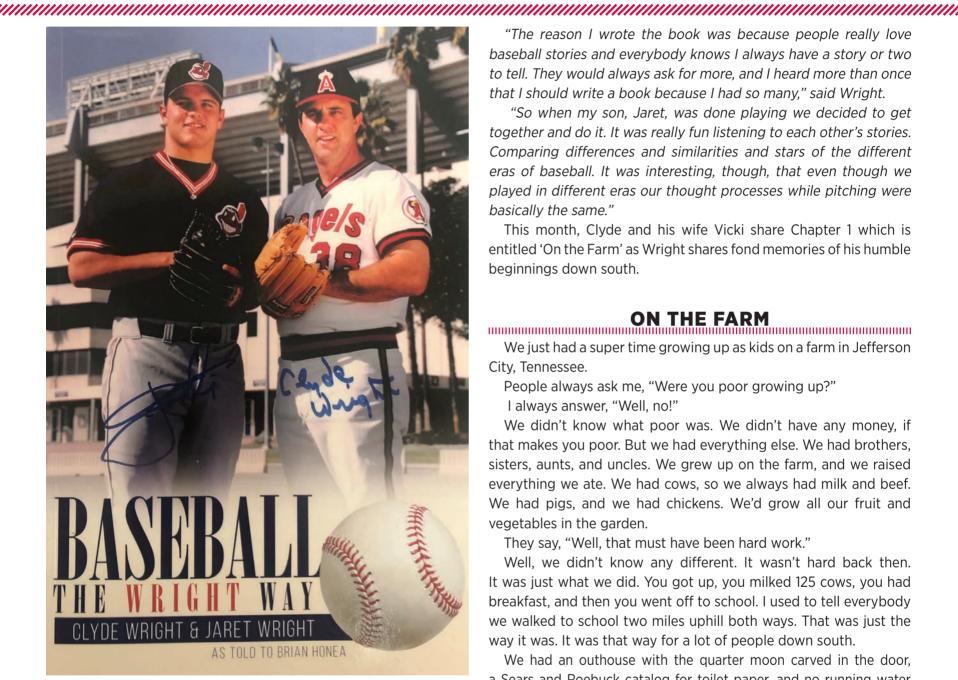

"But I am from Philly and to be from Philly you have to be gritty and tough, and you have to be a hard worker. Also, when you see Santa Claus, you have to throw a snowball at him too. That is just part of being from Philly. All of those characteristics are embodied by Mike Trout.

"He does whatever the coach asks him to do, whether it is stealing a base or robbing the other team of a home run or hitting for power or average. He gets it all done.

"We are certainly proud of him, and the head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, Doug Pederson, gave me a message to give to Mike: 'If this baseball thing, this day job, does not work out, we have a helmet and shoulder pads ready for you, and you can come play with us.'"

THE WRIGHT STUFF

Angels alum Clyde "Skeeter" Wright has written a book and he is sharing it with Angel Magazine!

A former 20-game winner for the club, and a long-time contributor to the local baseball community and Angel ambassador, the affable Wright worked with his son and writer Brian Honea to pen Baseball The Wright Way, which can be purchased at retail book stores, Amazon and online merchants.

"The reason I wrote the book was because people really love baseball stories and everybody knows I always have a story or two to tell. They would always ask for more, and I heard more than once that I should write a book because I had so many," said Wright.

"So when my son, Jaret, was done playing we decided to get together and do it. It was really fun listening to each other's stories. Comparing differences and similarities and stars of the different eras of baseball. It was interesting, though, that even though we played in different eras our thought processes while pitching were basically the same."

This month, Clyde and his wife Vicki share Chapter 1 which is entitled 'On the Farm' as Wright shares fond memories of his humble beginnings down south.

ON THE FARM

We just had a super time growing up as kids on a farm in Jefferson City, Tennessee.

People always ask me, "Were you poor growing up?"

I always answer, "Well, no!"

We didn't know what poor was. We didn't have any money, if that makes you poor. But we had everything else. We had brothers, sisters, aunts, and uncles. We grew up on the farm, and we raised everything we ate. We had cows, so we always had milk and beef. We had pigs, and we had chickens. We'd grow all our fruit and vegetables in the garden.

They say, "Well, that must have been hard work."

Well, we didn't know any different. It wasn't hard back then. It was just what we did. You got up, you milked 125 cows, you had breakfast, and then you went off to school. I used to tell everybody we walked to school two miles uphill both ways. That was just the way it was. It was that way for a lot of people down south.

We had an outhouse with the quarter moon carved in the door, a Sears and Roebuck catalog for toilet paper, and no running water except the creek that ran behind the house, which we used to bathe in.

We'd go rabbit hunting, and we would throw rocks and hit the rabbits. You could eat the rabbits. We'd go squirrel hunting, and the squirrel would run all the way to the top of the tree. One day, my brothers and I were out hunting, and we brought home two squirrels.

Dad looked at 'em, and he said, "Wait a minute. There's no meat on these squirrels. You knocked all the meat off 'em. Next time you go hunting, use the other hand to throw." We'd tell that story, and people would just die laughing.

We all had a good relationship with my dad. It wasn't like he'd walk up and hug you after you did something good, but you could just tell he loved all his kids by the way he would look at you. If you did something good, he'd look at you with a different expression on his face. But if you did something bad, he had that expression on his face that told you that you did something wrong. It was that way with all the kids — my five brothers and my sister. There was no yelling or screaming or anything like that. You could tell just by the expression on his face how he felt.

He taught me always to do the right thing and always tell the truth. It was always better to tell the truth whether it got you in trouble or not because the punishment was always easier when you told the truth than if you lied and he found out later that you lied to him.

On the farm, we always had dogs, cats, and all kinds of animals. At one time, my father had twelve little beagle dogs which could chase rabbits. My dad had 'em all named. He could sit on the front porch and listen to 'em run and chase the rabbits. He could tell each one by the way they barked, which one was in the lead, which one was behind. He'd just sit there and listen to 'em run. We had two big ol' redbone hounds. We'd go hunting with 'em all the time for possums and raccoons.

When I was a kid, we never had to look to find somebody to play with because I had five brothers. We could play football, or we could play three-on-three basketball. Any sport that we wanted to play, we could play it. We never had to get somebody else from outside the family to play. I can remember one year we played a baseball game, and they were announcing the lineup, and the first six guys in the batting order were all named Wright. It was me and all my brothers. I was pitching, one was catching, one played left field, one played right field, and one was playing first base. The announcer said, "Wait a minute, this can't be right."

I'll never forget one time when my older brother was playing first base. The ball hit his pocket and set his pants on fire. Somebody threw him a ball, and he missed it, and it hit his pocket. He carried those matchstick matches in his pocket to light his cigarettes, and when the ball hit those matchstick matches, it caught fire. We had to pour water on his uniform.

We had a good time playing baseball. We would use cow patties (dried cow manure) for bases and to make the occasional frisbee to someone's head. We would take horse manure, dip it in water, let it dry out, and play dodgeball with it. When we threw it and hit something, or somebody, it would splat. We would also take a pig's bladder and blow it up and use it for a football.

When we played catch, we didn't have baseballs lying around to play, so we would put tape on a tennis ball and play catch. When we got tired of playing catch, one pitched and the other one would hit. If you got mad at whoever was batting, you'd just hit him, and that thing with the tape on it would hurt. And I don't think two days went by a row that we didn't get in a fight. There were six boys, three on a side, and that was a pretty good tussle. And then here came Mom. She'd line us all up to take a whipping. We got pretty smart because she would make us go cut a switch. We'd leave the leaves on it, and we would fight to see who was in line first because the leaves wouldn't hurt. She finally got smart, and she'd take the switch and trim those leaves off. Then it would hurt.

We all stayed pretty close. If one of us got in a fight in grammar school, the other five were always there. There weren't too many other families that had five or six brothers in the same school. Of course, we had fights among ourselves when we played, but when it came to someone outside the family wanting to fight us at school, it was six against one or two.

Of course, there were some things that I never outgrew from being raised on the farm. I still love to garden, and I always have. People in Japan knew that I can grow Japanese cucumbers, Japanese eggplants, potatoes, carrots, peas, or anything. In fact, I just had the Japanese come over and do a TV show in my backyard, in my garden. I'm an old farmer, so I can definitely farm.

Clyde won 100 games during his time in the Majors. He was an All-Star with the Halos in 1970 — a season that saw him win 22 games, a career-high, and toss a no-hitter versus Oakland. He first joined the Angels when the club selected him in the 1965 amateur draft.

Jaret pitched for five teams during his 11-year big league career from 1997-07. He pitched in the postseason six times including the 1997 World Series with the Indians as a rookie. He was born in Anaheim and went to Katella High School.

In May, Angel Magazine will publish Chapter 5 entitled "Major League Debut."

ALUM SPEAK/ANTHONY RENDON

Anthony Rendon makes his Angels debut in 2020.

Chuck Finley, Rod Carew and Mark Langston, meanwhile, have a combined 29 years of on-field experience with the Halos plus more service time with the organization in a number of capacities including coaching and broadcasting.

Each esteemed alum provided their initial reaction to Rendon's decision with join the Angels.

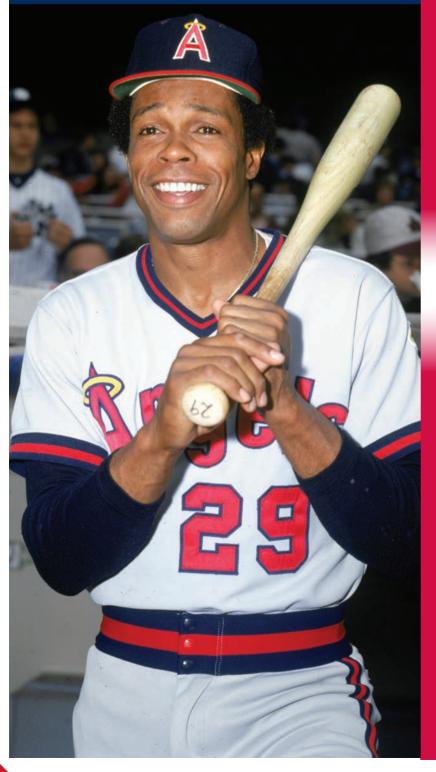

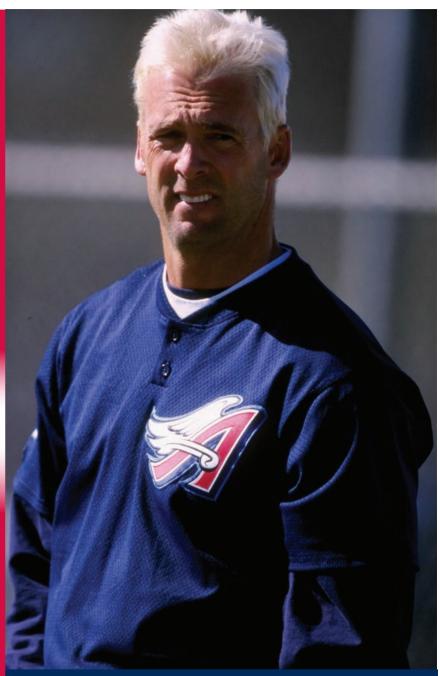

"I was watching a lot of baseball last October, and knowing in the back of my mind that the Angels do need pitching, I was watching Rendon in particular very closely, along with Juan Soto, and those guys really stood out to me. The atbats he was able to produce in those high leverage, high pressure situations was impressive. You sort of see his pulse rate. You see how he slows the game down. That is what the best of the best can do. It was fun to watch then and it is really going to be fun to watch with the Angels now."

ALUM SPEAK/ANTHONY RENDON

"Up and down this Angels lineup, anybody can hurt you and Rendon now makes it a lot tougher. He can hit and he uses the whole field to hit. He is an amazing third baseman and you love watching him play. Congratulations to him for deciding to come here and to the Angels for bringing him here."

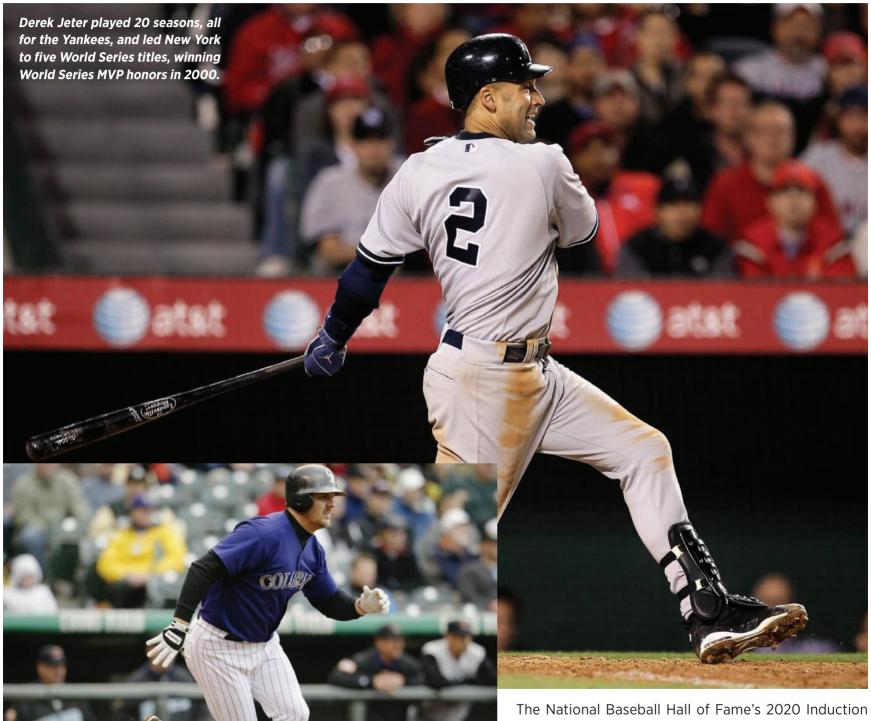

"The Angels were pretty good offensively last season and now when you put Rendon in front of, or behind, Trouty, it is a pretty scary lineup. It is a real nice-looking lineup. I have a lot of friends who work as coaches and scouts, and Bob Boone in particular told me how the kid can play, how he brings it every day. Bob has been with the Nationals and told me [Rendon] plays the game right 100 percent of the time. That is what we needed here. That type of play and that type of leadership blended with guys like Trouty and you need that over a full season. I like everything I have heard about Rendon. He is a gamer."
