- Opponents of the impeachment inquiry say the Democrats are conducting an unfair inquiry that violates President Trump's due process rights. It has been fundamentally tainted by weeks of secret, Soviet-style hearings in which Trump hasn't been able to face his own accusers.

- Supporters of the impeachment inquiry say the process has been fair, starting with private interviews to stop witnesses from sharing information. Republicans and Democrats had the same amount of time to question witnesses. And last week, the House voted for a formal inquiry, making interview transcripts and future hearings public. Republicans are attacking the process because they can't defend Trump on the facts.
