Stroman will get his start skipped

By MARK W. SANCHEZ

The Yankees have "difficult decisions to make," manager Aaron Boone said Friday after making another one.

The club's rotation has a new odd man out. After Nestor Cortes' start was skipped last week, it will be Marcus Stroman who at least temporarily falls out of the starting group this turn.

Stroman has been the weakest link of late and will now be unlinked, available out of the bullpen Sunday after four days' rest. Remaining in the rotation will be Gerrit Cole, Luis Gil, Carlos Rodon, Clarke Schmidt and Cortes, who had expressed frustration - and later acceptance — after tag-teaming a start with Schmidt last Sat-

In that outing, Cortes threw 4 1/3 hitless, scoreless innings. On Thursday, the lefty held the Red Sox to one run in five innings while striking out nine in a 2-1 win. He is trending up, while Stroman has been trending down.

The righty was excellent in the first half, when he pitched to a 3.51 ERA in 19 starts, but has struggled as the season has lengthened. In his two September outings, Stroman has allowed eight runs in nine innings and elevated his ERA to 4.07.

In his first season in pinstripes, the 33-year-old has performed roughly to expectations: He has taken the ball consistently, rarely been knocked around - the Yankees own a 17-11 record in his starts — but might lack frontof-the-rotation stuff.

"He is one of the reasons we're here," Boone said of Stroman, who is signed at least through next season. "He's gone to the post for us, taken all his starts, won a lot of ballgames for us."

Boone met with Stroman on Thursday, when Cortes pitched well, to deliver news Boone said Stroman handled well.

"Basically [Stroman's] message to me is: 'Whatever you need, and I'll be ready to go,' "Boone said before the Yankees' 5-4 comeback win over the Red Sox.
