Abstract

The Extensible Markup Language (XML) is a subset of SGML that is completely described in this document. Its goal is to enable generic SGML to be served, received, and processed on the Web in the way that is now possible with HTML. XML has been designed for ease of implementation and for interoperability with both SGML and HTML.

Why "greeting"?

```
<?xml version="1.0"?>
<greeting>Hello, world!</greeting>
```

Do we actually implement this, or move it on v20?

Challenge

A screenshot of a Twitter thread. On the left is a dark blue sidebar with icons for home, notifications, messages, profile, menu, search, and compose. The main content area shows a tweet from Liam R E Quin (@barefootliam) dated 21 Jan, expressing disappointment about not attending #xmlprague. It is followed by a reply from XMLPrague (@xmlprague) dated 29 Jan, saying they miss him and perhaps someone will step forward. A second reply from XMLPrague (@xmlprague) dated 29 Jan, replying to @xmlprague and @georgebina, asks if barefoot with red hair is a challenge. The bottom of the screenshot shows a reply to @xmlprague and others.

Sad not to be going to #xmlprague this year - we no longer have a W3C XML Activity for me to represent there :( so if you go, have an AWESOME time for me, OK?
