10.1071/CP23198

Crop & Pasture Science

Supplementary Material

Ability of wheat genotypes to form large rhizosheaths may enhance survival of false-break events in rainfed production

Livinus Emebiri[A,*], Maheswaran Rohan[A], Shane Hildebrand[A], and Wayne Pitt[A]

[A]NSW Department of Primary Industries, Wagga Wagga Agricultural Institute, Wagga Wagga, NSW 2650, Australia.

[*]Correspondence to: Livinus Emebiri NSW Department of Primary Industries, Wagga Wagga Agricultural Institute, Wagga Wagga, NSW 2650, Australia Email: Livinus.Emebiri@dpi.nsw.gov.au

Supplementary Figure S1. (A) Rhizosheath size on wheat variety, Scepter with 5 mm rainwater after 14 d growth on vertosol (Leeton) soil type, (B) rhizosheath size on Scepter wheat with 5 mm rainwater after 14 d growth on kandosol (Wagga) soil type.