ROOTS OF INDIGENOUS GOVERNANCE

A Facilitator's Guide to Indigenous Nationhood for Visionary Leaders

INTRODUCTION

Indigenous Nation governments are at the crossroads of decolonization and self-determination. A strong Government with a great Governance system enables Indigenous Nations to assert their inherent right to self-determination and self-governance – the path to Indigenous Nationhood.

Indigenous governments in Canada align along a Nationhood continuum that starts with First Nations following the Indian Act and progresses to more complex Nation governments that assert self-determination beyond Treaty and territorial agreements. Along this spectrum are tribal council governments, First Nations that opted out of Indian Act through sectoral enabling legislation, communities under self-government arrangements with the federal government, and communities and Nations that operate under the governance provisions of modern Treaties. The diagram below outlines the path of the Nationhood continuum.

ROOTS OF INDIGENOUS GOVERNANCE

More specifically, and in terms of the themes in this guide, Indigenous governments in Canada differ in terms of:

People from reserve community to Nation

Governance
from Indian Act to First Nation own constitution
(process)

Government
from Indian Act
band council to Nation governing body (structure)

Land from Reserve to traditional territory,
and all resources

Economy
from dependency to self-reliance

These five dimensions are addressed with this guide as pillars of Nationhood.

Most First Nations operate under Crown-delegated authority set out by the Indian Act; however, a small number operate under some form of delegated authority that may have been achieved by opting out of certain provisions of the Indian Act under federal enabling legislation, or under self-government regime and other arrangements with the federal government. A small but growing number of Indigenous governments work under the auspices of a modern-day Treaty. Most Indigenous governments are community-focused governments and only a few are Nation governments, though most reflect the fact that the Indian Band (not the Indigenous Nation) is still the basic unit of government for Indigenous communities in Canada.

Indigenous governments are diverse and range in complexity, from Nation authorities and jurisdiction, to administering parts of programs and services typically delivered by various levels of other governments.

This guide is designed to support the majority of micro- to mid-size Indigenous Nations that wish to assert their inherent right to self-determination and self-government. It offers ideas to address the distinctive challenges that Indigenous Nations face in Canada, particularly British Columbia, now and into the future. It provides a perspective deeper in scope than that of the conventional band councils, which choose to operate under the auspices of the Indian Act. Accordingly, the topics in this assessment tool may or may not fit the specific condition or situation that every Indigenous Nation wants to address.

“Nation-Building: One size does not fit all, but the foundations are the same.”

ROOTS OF INDIGENOUS GOVERNANCE

How to Use the Guided Government Assessment Tool

This tool was designed for use by the Indigenous Governance Advisory Team (IGAT) led by New Relationship Trust. It is designed to identify the current status of self-determination authority and jurisdiction and self-government responsibilities (e.g., laws, practices, procedures, systems, institutions, programs, government administration), by checking if a tool is in place or it needs updating or creation.

The Facilitator's Guidebook is to be used in a workgroup setting where the key decision makers (Chief and Council, senior administrators) are led by a trained facilitator (e.g. IGAT Advisor) to conduct a systematic review of the Indigenous Nation.

While reviewing this guide, consider the resources and capacity you will need to support the Nation to determine its Nationhood Vision. This assessment tool will help you to identify the gaps that need to be addressed so that the community can fulfill its Nationhood goals.

Upon the completion of the guided assessment tool, you will have a list of what the Indigenous community has in place and what needs to be achieved to strengthen the Nation's governance systems. For example:

- Overview of the inherent right to self-determination and self-governance.
- Awareness of current situation.
- Vision of what the community wishes to accomplish in order to achieve their Nationhood aspirations.
- Understanding of what needs to be done to help the community to achieve its Nationhood goals.

Who Should Use this Assessment Tool?

- ✓ Indigenous Nation Government Governing Body – Chief and Council, Hereditary Leadership
- ✓ Senior Administrators
- ✓ Management team – Program Directors and Managers

About the Guide

This guide represents three of a four phase series.

The Nation's history, values, principles and ways of life:

- Who are we as a People?
- Where do we want to 'go' and 'be' as a Nation (big goals)?
- What makes us a distinct Nation?
- Are we using our traditional laws, protocols, customs and ceremonies to strengthen our Nation?

How the Nation forms its Institutions of governance:

- Where do we require support to rebuild our Nation?
- Are we on our journey back to Nationhood?
- What is our level of readiness (Commitment and Capacity) to achieve our self-defined Nation goals?
- What will be our relationship with Canada?

How our government organizes to deliver our mandates and fulfill our Nationhood Vision:

- Defining who we are as a People
- Detailed description and mapping of our territory
- Developing a modern constitution by transforming our traditional laws and practices
- Goals to assert authority and jurisdiction over our lands and citizens
- Creating a governance development plan for our Nation with timelines and resources

Phase Four content will be found in separate documents, which will include:

- Tailored modules to align with the needs of the individual Nation's governance development plans.
- Opportunities for nations with similar needs to collaborate on training.

ROOTS OF INDIGENOUS GOVERNANCE

Each phase has questions related to the following five pillars of Nationhood:

People	Who we are - what defines us as a People
Governance	Develop a modern constitution based on our traditional values, principles, and practices. Create a governance development plan for our Nation with timelines and resources.
Government	Create effective government Institutions and systems to attend to the needs and aspirations of our Nation.
Land	Assert control over our ancestral territory and resources, and their relevance to our Nation.
Economy	Focus on economic prosperity and self-sufficiency, and how we will build the economy of our self-reliant Nation.

Next Steps

Upon the completion of the assessment tool, you will share with the Nation a list of what they have in place and what needs to be done to strengthen their Nation. Once the assessment session is completed, the governing body (Chief and Council and senior administrators in most cases) will work with the IGAT Advisor to establish a work plan to address the identified gaps and deficiencies (e.g. next step is to plan and deliver a strategic planning session with members of the Chief and Council, senior administrators and program managers).

After the completion of the guided assessment session, the Nation should update its planning documents (strategic plan) to support a system of continuous capacity development. The gap analysis should also be addressed in the work plans of the senior administrators and the appropriate departments (e.g., health department to establish equitable health care system) and programs delivered by the Nation.

“The process of Nation rebuilding must be done from the inside out.”

-- Gwen Phillips, Ktunaxa Nation Council

PHASE 1:

REAFFIRMING OUR NATIONHOOD

Indigenous Nations thrived through the adherence of the principles, values and laws of our ancestors, and how these were applied to their decision-making, use of lands and resources, and relationship with others. In this section, you are invited to identify the important ancestral foundation of your Nation and how they relate to your Nation-building and efforts to assert your inherent rights.

This section explores ancestral strength and asks you to identify the foundational principles, teachings, customs and beliefs that define the resilience and longevity of your Nation. This includes social and cultural practices that define Nations, with a focus on ancestral governance that helped shape Nationhood today. The section reviews the importance of land and the resources in building a self-reliant economy, with questions that focus on the fundamental aspects of evolving culture and economic sources.

Pillar	History, Values and Principles of Nationhood
People	Know who we are as a People Understand what makes us distinct Nations Identify where we want to 'go' and 'be' as a Nation (big goals) Knowing our ancestral societies' values and principles, customs, beliefs, and ways of life
Governance	Have a vision of where we want to 'go' and what we want our Nation to 'become' Asserting our inherent right to self-government and self-determination
Government	Describe the functions of government in ancestral times Apply our traditional laws protocols and ceremonies to rebuild our Nation
Land	Define our traditional territory, centrality of land, and balance with nature
Economy	Know our ancestral economy

PHASE 2:

GAUGING OUR CAPACITY AS A NATION

Governance is a foundational component of Indigenous Nationhood, along with language and culture. Traditionally, Indigenous Nations had their own governance systems, developed their own laws and enforced those laws. These customary laws were often based on the principle of land stewardship – understanding the connection between the land and the people. For Indigenous peoples, land is more than physical land: it includes water, air and all living creatures. Subsequently, traditional laws, customs and beliefs were oriented toward protecting the land as part of a complete ecosystem that they relied upon.

This phase examines the key governance institutions of your Nation government. Attention is given to pillars of governance, law-making, the mandate of government, the special role of the governing body to lead your Nation and establishing the essential infrastructure to rebuild the economy. These questions lead to determining your level of readiness - commitment and capacity – to achieve your self-defined Nation goals, and what your Nation requires to support its journey back to Nationhood so that the next seven generations are strong and prosperous.

Pillar	How Indigenous Nations Organize their Governance Institutions
People	Understanding citizen roles within Nation institutions
Governance	Framing the governance change management processes to strengthen the Nation. Defining the relationship with Canada.
Government	Inherent right to self-determination and self-governance. Gauge level of readiness (commitment and capacity) to achieve self-defined Nation goals.
Land	Assert authority and jurisdiction over traditional territories and the resources.
Economy	Understanding economic infrastructure and working within economic markets.

- Yes No NA

PHASE 3:

DEFINE YOUR TRADITIONAL AND MODERN INSTITUTIONS OF LAW MAKING AND GOVERNANCE

Indigenous Nationhood involves traditional values and principles in governance with modern institutions. This section focuses on services and programs that your Nation requires from its government, on how the governing body and administration work. It also considers the important topic of how engaged your Nation is to remove itself from under the Indian Act.

The focus of the questions involves asserting inherent rights to self-determination and self-governing your traditional territory. The questions also involve Aboriginal rights and title, consultation and accommodation, and free, prior and informed consent as it relates to the Indigenous-Crown relationship and the Indigenous Nation-Business / Industry relationship.

Pillar	How and What Indigenous Government Delivers
People	Distinguish your People – collect information on who you are for effective planning. Programs and services needed by the citizens to support Nationhood building.
Governance	Sanction your modern constitution based on your traditional laws and practices. Create a governance development plan for your Nation with timeline and resources.
Government	Set goals to assert authority and jurisdiction over our lands and citizens. Establish revenue goals that foster self-reliance and self-sufficiency.
Land	Have a detailed description and map with traditional names of sites in your territory. Know how land management and administration functions in today's Indigenous Nations' territories.
Economy	Implement economic strategies, policies and programs that foster prosperity.

Coastal Turning Point First Nations	Coastal First Nations is an alliance of nine Nations along the west coast of BC. They united to govern and ensure the protection of their lands and resources, cultural resources, and use in their traditional territories through planning and the issuing of their own licenses and permits. They also established their own lands watchmen program. https://coastalfirstnations.ca/	Lands management Governance
Fort Nelson First Nation	This northern Nation has remained steadfast while grounded in ancestral values. These values guide them in their participation in the regional economy. ROOTS OF INDIGENOUS GOVERNANCE

Haida Nation	In 1981 the Haida Nation established the Haida Watchmen program to protect heritage sites and resources, through security and education of visitors on Haida culture and values, and through governing tourism activities to cultural sites. The program is funded from several sources, including fees visitors pay to enter Gwaii Haanas. http://www.haidanation.ca/ https://www.readersdigest.ca/travel/canada/haida-gwaii-watchmen/	Land Government Ancestral knowledge
Ktunaxa Nation	The Ktunaxa Nation is centered on “Building the Nation, one Citizen at a Time.” Its employment focuses on citizens interests in employment and career training by developing Individual Training Plans, rather than creating an employment strategy that attempts to fit people into jobs or industries rather than pursue careers that are of interest to each person. http://www.ktunaxa.org/	People Economy Government
Nisga’a Lisims Government	Nisga’a was the first modern treaty, negotiated and signed outside the modern-day BC Treaty process. The Nisga’a Nation organized their governance in accordance to their own institutions’ values and beliefs. https://www.nisgaanation.ca/	Governance Ancestral values Government organization
Osoyoos Indian Band	The Nation is steadfast in promoting a working culture driven by their ancestors’ belief that “Natives have always worked for a living.” Nation building began decades ago through agriculture and forestry initiatives, leading in tourism regional planning with neighbouring municipalities, and seeking solid partners and advisors for their economic development activities. http://oib.ca/	Economy Government Governance Planning Partnerships
Tk’emlúps te Secwépemc (TteS)	This Nation has taken leadership in partnerships with municipalities and developers, as well as matrimonial laws. Its agreement with the City of Kamloops includes sewage treated from the Tk’emlúps te Secwépemc through an existing sewer agreement, and their biosolids management plan. The Nation also established one of the first Indigenous Nation citizen-approved Matrimonial Real Property Laws. https://tkemlups.ca/ https://www.kamloops.ca/city-services/utilities-services/kamloops-sewage-treatment-centre/biosolids	Infrastructure Government Matrimonial Real Property People

Tsilhqot'in National Government	Tsilhqot'in reaffirmed their Inherent Rights by pushing through to the highest courts its rights and laws over its traditional territories. The Tsilhqot'in Nation v. British Columbia is a landmark case that declares Aboriginal Title beyond the First Nation reserve boundary. The Nation also demonstrated leadership during the provincial wildfires with its Emergency readiness program. https://www.tsilhqotin.ca/wp-content/uploads/2020/12/the-fires-awakened-us.pdf https://scc-csc.lexum.com/scc-csc/scc-csc/en/item/14246/index.do?q=tsilhqot%27in http://www.tsilhqotin.ca/	Aboriginal Rights and Title Governance Emergency readiness
Westbank First Nation	After Westbank First Nation self-government act, citizens developed the Westbank First Nation Constitution, which sets out how the community is governed and how it exercises its jurisdiction. The Nation established an Economic Development Commission as a next stage to economy building, in support of the many entrepreneurs and developers among its citizens. https://www.wfn.ca/docs/wfn-constitution.pdf?RD=1	Government Self-Government Economy

③ Economics of the Indian Act

Mainly for historical reasons and of government colonial policy, the Indian Act has several key economic provisions that differ significantly from those that govern the mainstream Canadian economy. The following are the most important aspects of what enables and presents First Nations economy building.

- The communal property base of Indian Reserve lands is not compatible with fee simple ownership of private property. Instead, certificates of possession / occupation or temporary permits can be issued by the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development, which allow for the enjoyment of only limited property rights on reserve lands.
- Limited private ownership rights and transfer of interests on real property, including the sale of such rights and inheritance of land and buildings located on reserve can only be transferred to another member of the same First Nation, resulting in a much smaller number of potential buyers and lower market value for such assets.
- Reserve lands cannot be sold but can be leased to third parties for a period, after a long, risky and expensive land designation process.

ROOTS OF INDIGENOUS GOVERNANCE

- Succession rights (inheritance) are restricted on the transfer of real property only to heirs who are registered citizens of the same First Nation.
- The security that can be offered for loan collateral is limited to the leasehold interest only.
- No fee simple title is allowed for Indian reserve lands; however, Certificates of Possession may be issued by the federal Minister of Aboriginal Affairs.
- Ownership and transfer of real property (sale or inheritance of land and buildings) located on reserve can only transferable to other members of the same First Nation, resulting in much lower market value for reserve lands.
- Reserve lands cannot be sold, but they can be leased by third parties, after the completion of a risky, lengthy and expensive land designation process. Studies conducted by the Fiscal Realities Economists consulting group concluded that it takes six times longer and costs ten times more to bring a project on reserve to fruition than another conventional mainstream economy.
- Succession (inheritance) rights are not allowed on transfer of real property to heirs not members of the same First Nation of the deceased.
- Severe restrictions apply on security that may be pledged as collateral for a loan assumed by an Indian living on reserve.
- The only form of security available to support projects on reserve is the mortgage of the leasehold interest on a designated parcel.
- Conditional sales agreements are another vehicle that can be used to address security concerns of lenders, but this form of security is not fitted to support real property, although it could be used for other personal property.
- Loan guarantees are another potential security vehicle, but they are available for larger projects (not small businesses), and only to commercial lenders, not Aboriginal Capital Corporations (ACCs).

④ Impact Management Benefit Agreement Components

- Recognition of Aboriginal rights and title of affected First Nations
- Compensation for negative impact of new or existing developments and/or addressing past grievances
- Education, employment, training, and apprenticeships for community members
- Access to business opportunities through procurement opportunities for Indigenous-owned businesses
- Equity participation and /or economic rent on natural resources
- Management of cultural resources
- Mitigation of loss of ancestral practices – hunting, fishing, food gathering

ROOTS OF INDIGENOUS GOVERNANCE

- Environmental assessment, protection, management and monitoring of initial and cumulative impacts
- Protection of cultural and archaeological heritage resources
- Emergency preparedness and disaster management procedures
- Implementation framework
- Term of contract, renewals and updates
- Dispute resolution
- Decommissioning of physical structures

⑤ Government and the Economy

Economic Role of Government

- Establish sustainable revenue base to cover government expenditures (investment and expenses)
- Provide public goods (goods and services) services to citizens and communities
- Protect property rights – land title registry, tenure and other property rights
- Foster a healthy economy – establish an environment conducive to business investment and development
- Develop skilled and diverse labour force
- Establish fair tax system
- Foster economic development
- May go into business ventures with other partners

Government Strategies for a Stronger Economy

- Exercise jurisdiction in implementation of economic policies
- Promote economic development through fiscal incentives, investment in people, partnering with others and marketing economic opportunities
- Improve and expand the skills of community members through training subsidies, apprenticeships and individual training plans
- Enter into Impact Management Benefit Agreements with key stakeholders in the region
- Expand access to land and capital
- Expand tax base
- Reduce economic leakages
- Establish economic linkages with neighbouring communities
